IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON.

New Phase of the Kansas Question.

Removal of Secretary Stanton for Convening the Kansas Legislature.

Appointment of Gen. Denver in his Stead.

Highly Interesting Debate in the Senate, between Messrs. Douglas and Bigler.

Election of Speaker of Ohio on Printer to the House, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

THE President to-day sent in the Senate the nomination of Gen. Denver, now Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to be the Secretary of Kansas Territory, thus putting Mr. STANTON out. The reason given, in the fact that STANTON has convened the Territorial Legislature on the 7th of December, in contravention of the letter of the Constitutional Convention to submit the entire Constitution entirely to the people. The President says that this conduct is calculated seriously to embarrass the Executive, and to complicate the present confusion and difficulty there.

The confirmation will, probably, be considered tomorrow. As STANTON has never been confirmed, the consideration of his nomination is not necessary to a consideration of his removal.

There will be a bitter fight on the confirmation of GREEN—not but that his appointment is popular, but because the reason for the removal of STANTON will not be accepted as sound.

General DENVER left the city a week ago, ostensibly on Ohio, in consequence of the illness of a friend. It seems that he suffered was Kansas, and that DENVER really was sent there by the President to influence the election of the Slave and induce the rejection of the Free-Slavery clause of the Constitution. His appointment as Secretary cannot prevent the convening of the Legislature or check its proceedings. The legislative leaders are pledged only to take steps to repudiate the late Convention, by repealing the act authorizing it, and providing for a new Convention—possibly with specific instructions to submit the work to the people. The effect of this is expected to be that the election of the 21st will be made a nullity, and that the President will never put the Lecompton Constitution to send to Congress.

Senator DOUGLAS' speech to-day was a powerful effort, and completely demolished Lecompton. Senator BIGLER's attempt to sustain the views of the President were painfully weak. DOUGLAS completely bled him. This is the unanimous verdict. His reference to the confidential proceedings of a Democratic caucus, in order to infer a charge of insubordination against DOUGLAS, excites the admiration of all parties.

There will be a struggle in the Senate over the attempt to remove District-Attorney McKinney, which can only be accomplished by the consent of that body to confirm the nomination of his successor.

The President's personal intimation is to send THOMAS HOWARD's name to the Senate to-morrow, vice McKINNEY.

The District-Attorney of New-Orleans was removed to-day for letting Gen. WALKER off on light bail.

Jesse of Iowa is not so certain to sustain DOUGLAS. As he has no hopes of a reelection, there is reason to fear he will stick to "party organization," as directed by the President. The new moves in Kansas, however, will tend to leave the Northern man no other practical ground than that of DOUGLAS. S.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

The Administration having been advised by telegraph that Acting Governor STANTON had called a special meeting of the Territorial Legislature of Kansas, the President to-day forthwith removed him, and nominated to the Senate as his successor General DENVER, now Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who left for the West last week. The reason for the removal of Mr. STANTON is that he has violated the instructions heretofore given to Governor WALKER and to himself to do no act which could possibly disturb the peace of the Territory, but to exert all the means in their power to preserve it. The sole object and purpose of the convening of the Legislature, it is considered, can be only to engender strife and embarrass the people in voting on the Slavery question in the form proposed by the Constitutional Convention. There was no definite action by the Senate on Gen. DENVER's nomination. It is anticipated that a heated discussion will take place when that subject again comes before that body in secret session. Last week instructions were sent to Mr. STANTON to take every precaution to prevent disturbances at the ensuing election, and to afford free and unrestricted exercise of the election franchise. Doubts are expressed as to whether Governor WALKER's name will be sent to the Senate for confirmation.

Mr. LEADER, of the Ohio delegation, distinctly contradicts the statement that the Democratic members of that delegation have resolved to vote against the Lecompton Constitution. There has been neither any action nor discussion upon the subject among them.

XXXVth CONGRESS....First Session.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

The galleries were densely crowded at the hour of meeting.

Mr. FESS gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill for the improvement of the navigation of the Ohio River.

Mr. MASON offered a resolution, which was debated and passed, inviting the clergymen of the District of Columbia to officiate gratuitously as chaplains to the Senate.

Mr. GWIN gave notice of his intention to introduce bills for the construction of a Northern, Southern and Central Pacific Railroad. Also, of a bill to organize the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. DOUGLAS said that yesterday he was under the impression that the President had approved of the action of the Lecompton Convention, and while under that impression he felt it his duty to state that while he concurred in the general views of the message, yet so far as it did approve or endorse the action of that Convention he entirely dissented from it, and he would avail himself of an early opportunity to give his reasons for such dissent. Upon a more careful and critical examination of the Message he was rejoiced to find that the President had not entirely approved of the action of that Convention. He was also rejoiced to find that the President had not recommended that Congress should pass laws receiving Kansas into the Union as a State under the Constitution framed at Lecompton. True, the tone of the Message indicates the willingness of the President to sign any bill Congress might pass receiving Kansas as a State under that Constitution, but it was a very significant fact that the President had refrained from any indorsement of the Convention, and any recommendation as to the course which Congress should pursue in regard to the admission of Kansas. Indeed, the President had expressed deep mortification and disappointment that the whole Constitution was not submitted to the people of Kansas for their acceptance or rejection. He intended to show that Congress could not properly receive Kansas into the Union under the Lecompton Constitution. Not only the Slavery question, but all others must be submitted to the people of Kansas, as they are guaranteed the right to establish all their domestic institutions for themselves. On this principle the whole Constitution must be submitted, to ascertain whether it meets with their approbation. Mr. DOUGLAS contended that the people of Kansas ought to have an opportunity to vote against the Constitution, if they chose to do so. He compared it to the freedom of election in Paris when LOUIS NAPOLEON was chosen. The reason assigned why the people should not be allowed to vote on its acceptance was, that if they had a chance they would vote it down by an overwhelming majority. He believed that they would, and he thought it was a clear violation of the organic act to force on obnoxious Constitution upon them.

When Mr. DOUGLAS concluded there was applause from the galleries.

Mr. MASON moved they be cleared, remarking that the decorum of the Senate had been frequently violated in this way.

Mr. BIGGS hoped not.

Mr. GWIN thought the applause commenced on the floor, and it would be hard to punish spectators for following that example.

Mr. BIGGS hoped the motion would be withdrawn.

Mr. MASON acquiesced, but hoped the next time the offence was repeated, it would not be allowed to pass with impunity.

Mr. BIGLER (Pa.) replied to Mr. DOUGLAS, saying the Convention was called according to law, and had been recognized by the President and Governor of the Territory. It was their right to submit the Constitution to the people, or send it to Congress without such submission. If it was right in itself, Republican in form, and the people had fairly decided the Slavery question, it would not be wise to keep them out of the Union, simply because the whole Constitution had not been submitted to them. To do so would be inconsistent with the doctrine of non-intervention. There was nothing in the past history of the country to justify such a course. It would be the duty of Congress to look at the question as it came before them, and do the best they could, looking at the happiness of the entire country. He had long been under the impression that it would be best for the Union and Kansas that that State should be admitted at the first allowable opportunity in order to localize the strife. He would have preferred that the whole Constitution had been submitted to the people, but persons outside of the Territory have no right to interfere with the Slavery question there. He believed that the people of Kansas now have an opportunity to decide whether to have a free or slave State. He could not, however, determine his entire course until they shall make such decision. He said the position of Mr. DOUGLAS, to-day, was in utter derogation of that which he occupied when he voted for Mr. TOOMBS' bill, which proposed to make a State Constitution and put it into operation without submitting it to the vote of the people, and this only a short time ago. He could not understand how Mr. DOUGLAS had so readily become sensitive regarding the rights of that people, after having attempted such an infringement upon them.

Mr. MASON exposed and replied to what he characterized as a fallacy in the remarks of Mr. DOUGLAS.

Mr. DOUGLAS explained, and said he had been misrepresented.

Mr. BIGLER remarked that in a conversation with Col. HARRISON, who was an active member of the Convention, he understood him to say there were two Constitutions virtually.

Mr. DOUGLAS—If there are two, I should like to see the other.

Mr. BIGLER—I say precisely similar.

Mr. DOUGLAS—If precisely alike, what difference does it make if you may vote for one or the other?

Mr. BIGLER—One for a Free and the other for a Slave State. That is the difference.

Mr. DOUGLAS—It makes no difference how many copies they make. The simple point is that they only allow the people to vote on Slavery—nothing else. The Senator from Pennsylvania had assumed an air which I thought unnecessary and rather intimated to me that he spoke by authority.

Mr. BIGLER—I expressed my own views, deliberately formed, and they are in concurrence with those of the President.

Mr. DOUGLAS—I may have misunderstood him. I am certain he did not speak for the President; I know that, for the President has just spoken for himself in his Message, in which he condemns the Convention for not submitting the Constitution to the people, and refuses to recommend me to receive it. The President is a bold, frank man, and if he intended to give us an Administration measure, he would say so. It is not respectful to assume that we will do what he will not recommend us to do. Of course I know the Senator from Pennsylvania did not speak by authority.

Mr. BIGLER—I think I am safe in saying, and think the Senator from Illinois will agree, that the President upholds in his Message the doctrine that the Convention had a right to form a Constitution and submit it to the people for approval, or send it up to Congress for its approval. I think it is deducible from the Message that the President does not hold that because the entire Constitution was not submitted to the people, Kansas should be kept out of the Union.

Mr. DOUGLAS—I infer from the Message that the President does hold that the Convention had a right to form a Constitution and send it here. But that was only a right to petition for redress of grievances under the Federal Constitution, and not because the Legislature had power to constitute that a legal Convention.

Mr. BIGLER—Where did you get that?

Mr. DOUGLAS replied—A gentleman, (meaning Mr. THURMAN,) yesterday, read from a speech made by Mr. BUCHANAN twenty years ago, to show that the Legislature had no right to create a Convention to supersede the Territorial Government, and to attempt it would be gross usurpation. The Democratic Party has held that doctrine ever since, and asserted it a year ago by indorsing his (DOUGLAS') report from the Committee on Territories. Three hundred thousand copies were circulated as a party document, and he, himself, paid for one hundred thousand of them. (Laughter.)

Mr. BIGLER entered his protest and claimed the statute of limitation. He could not consent that Mr. DOUGLAS should hold the President responsible for principles laid down twenty years ago under entirely different circumstances. It is not half so long since Mr. DOUGLAS declared that the Missouri line was the best compromise. In 1849 he proposed to extend it to the Pacific Ocean. Yet he repealed the whole of it.

Mr. DOUGLAS denied the right of Mr. BIGLER to plead the statute of limitations. None but the authorized attorney of the party can thus interpose. As the Senator has denied any authority to speak for the President, he cannot file that plea. Mr. DOUGLAS approved of the statute of limitations; he needed one very much himself. He had never boasted that he had never changed his opinions. He felt every year a little wiser than the year before. Has the President ever withdrawn that opinion? He denied the right to plead the statute of limitations against the Charleston Convention, until the Charleston Convention meets. He stood now where he stood last year, because he believed he was right. It was true he voted for Mr. TOOMBS' bill, and he was ready to vote for it again. By doing so, there would be no quarrel. It would not do to taunt him with once voting for a measure he would not vote for now.

Mr. BIGLER said he had not taunted the Senator, who had complained that great wrong was done by not submitting the entire Constitution to the people, while he had voted to put a State Constitution into operation without submitting any part of it to the people.

Mr. DOUGLAS replied that his explanation was found in the language of the President in his instructions to Governor WALKER, taking it for granted that the Constitution was to be submitted to the people. Mr. TOOMBS' bill being silent on that subject, he took for granted that the Constitution would be submitted. If the President was right in taking that ground, why was not he (DOUGLAS) right?

Mr. BIGLER did not intend to hold the Senator from Illinois to anything which did not appear on the journals. At a private meeting, before Mr. TOOMBS' bill was introduced, it was held, in view of all the difficulties surrounding the question, that it would be better that nonresidents submitting the Constitution to the people should be inserted in the bill, and it was his understanding that the Convention then proposed would make a Constitution and send it to Congress without submitting it to the people.

Mr. DOUGLAS, in reply, said he would not like the Senator to hazarded what he would not openly declare. If he (DOUGLAS) was present at the meeting referred to and sanctioned such doctrine, let him (BIGLER) say so.

Mr. BIGLER said if he was constantly at fault it was patriotic indeed. Perhaps he had wrongfully spoken on the subject. He had told the Senator he did not intend to reflect upon him.

Mr. DOUGLAS remarked that he would release Mr. BIGLER from mercy, and asked him whether he knew that he (DOUGLAS) had either publicly or privately agreed that a Constitution should be adopted without consulting the people.

Mr. BIGLER stated what his distinct recollection was. He remembered very well that the subject was discussed in the house of the Senator from Illinois, but he was not sure that Mr. DOUGLAS participated in the debate, in which it was argued that under all the circumstances there ought not to be a promise in Mr. TOOMBS' bill, requiring the Constitution to be submitted.

Mr. DOUGLAS remarked that when the bill was silent on that subject, it was understood as a matter of course that the Constitution was to be submitted. That he was a party to force on the people a Constitution without its being submitted to them, was not true.

Mr. BIGLER explained that he had called Mr. DOUGLAS' attention to his course on Mr. TOOMBS' bill, because it was in derogation of his doctrine laid down to-day. When the Senator from Illinois introduced his preparatory bill for Minnesota, he provided that the Constitution should be submitted. If the inference was that the Constitution would be submitted where such a bill is silent, why was the clause inserted in the Minnesota bill? He did not impugn the Senator's patriotism, honorable motives, or courage. He had no more constant admirer than himself, or one who oftener defended him.

Mr. HALE wanted to know some of the very peculiar circumstances which rendered the elective franchise extremely difficult. (Laughter.)

Mr. BIGLER said no one had said more on this subject than Mr. HALE, and of violence, and of keeping Free-State people from the polls. He (BIGLER) was interested to get Kansas into the Union.

Mr. DOUGLAS, to prevent wrong impressions, asked Mr. BIGLER whether he meant to be understood as saying that he, in his own house or elsewhere, had expressed himself in favor of the Constitution without being submitted to the people.

Mr. BIGLER—I made no such allegation.

Mr. DOUGLAS—You left it to be inferred. I will not allow it to be inferred that I so declared in my own house. If I did not, acquit me of it.

Mr. BIGLER—I repeat, I have no recollection of the Senator participating in the discussion.

Mr. DOUGLAS—If I had nothing to do with it, I don't know what my house had to do with it. (Laughter.)

Mr. BIGLER—What I said was truth, and that only. What I said is on record.

On motion of Mr. GREEN, of Missouri, the further consideration of the Message was postponed, and the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

Two propositions were pending from yesterday, one submitted by Mr. HOUSTON, of Alabama, that the House proceed to the election of a printer, with a proviso that the House retains its right in Congress to modify the existing law on the subject of the public printing; the printer who may be elected under this resolution receiving said election with and upon the condition above set forth; and that a Committee be appointed to examine the whole subject, and report such change or improvement as they may deem advisable,—and the other by Mr. SMITH, of Virginia, as a substitute, providing for a similar examination, and that the election be postponed until the Committee make a report.

Mr. BANKS, of Massachusetts, moved to lay Mr. HOUSTON's motion on the table.

The motion was negatived, 82 against 106.

Mr. SMITH's substitute was rejected by a vote of 91 against 118.

Mr. HOUSTON's resolution was adopted by a majority of 40.

The House then proceeded to the election of Printer.

Mr. BOCOCK nominated Mr. STEADMAN.

Mr. WASHBURN, (Maine,) nominated Mr. GEORGE M. WESTON.

Mr. STEADMAN received 121 votes; Mr. WESTON, 80. Four votes scattering.

The former was then declared elected.

The members then selected their seats by lottery. Adjourned.

PROCLAMATIONS BY PROVISIONAL GOVERNOR CALHOUN—MASS CONVENTION AT LEAVENWORTH—SPECIAL SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE, &C.

ST. LOUIS, Wednesday, Dec. 8.

The Democrat this evening received letters from Kansas, containing two proclamations by Provisional Governor CALHOUN, specifying the manner in which the election of the 21st inst., for submitting the Constitution, and of the 1st Monday in January, for the election of State officers, will be held, and also giving the names of the County Commissioners for each County.

At a Mass Convention, held at Leavenworth on the 27th ult., resolutions were passed requesting the Territorial Legislature to meet at Lecompton on Dec. 2. The resolution was adopted under the belief that Secretary STANTON will recognize the Legislature so convened.

General LANE offered a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, pledging themselves that in case STANTON declined to convene the Legislature, to put the Topeka Government in motion, and to stand or fall by it.

A Democratic Convention had been called for the 24th inst.

The Democrat learns from private sources that STANTON has issued a proclamation calling a special session of the Legislature, to meet on Dec. 7.

Further from the Utah Expedition.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, Dec. 8.

A letter to the Republican from the Utah Expedition, the main points of which were telegraphed this morning, states that Colonel COOK's command was 150 miles west of Fort Laramie Nov. 2. Thus far the traveling had been pleasant and easy, but now the weather was growing colder, provisions getting scarce, provender giving out, and it is apparent that great hardships are before us still. Notwithstanding the threats from Salt Lake City, the entire army will proceed as rapidly as the elements and the supply of food will permit, to the Winter quarters marked out by Colonel JOHNSON on Honey Fort, Green River. It is rumored that BRIGHAM YOUNG's intention is to fight the troops this Winter, as it will afford the best chance for an equal conflict, and then before reinforcements can be sent to the troops in the Spring, destroy all the Mormon possessions in Utah and proceed to some other country.

Collision between the Steamers Ocean Wave and Long Branch.

SANDY HOOK, Wednesday, Dec. 9.

The steamers Ocean Wave and Long Branch came in collision this afternoon at Sandy Hook. The Ocean Wave was bound to New-York and the Long Branch to Ocean Port and Shrewsbury. The Ocean Wave put her freight on one side and saved the boat from going down. The Long Branch was the worst damaged and it was with great difficulty that she proceeded on her voyage. The concussion was so great that the passengers on both boats were thrown off their feet and many badly bruised. Among the injured Col. WM. JONES, of the Highlands, is feared to be dangerously so.

A dense fog prevailed at the time of the disaster. The operator of the Sandy Hook telegraph station heard the fog bells ringing, and being near the shore, almost immediately afterwards heard the crash of the boats as they came together. The passengers throw no blame on the officers of the boats.

The weather is still (8 P. M.) very foggy.

Probable Murder in the Eleventh Ward.

Two desperate characters named LUKE WHELAN and PHIL. MCGUIRE, entered the store of ADAM HARSHMAN last night about 7 o'clock, and called for crackers and cheese. Mr. H. told them he would give them none until they had paid up an "old score" which they owed him. Immediately they threw scales, bottles, and everything within their reach at the grocer and his wife, wounding both severely. Mr. HERSHMAN told them to leave the store, but they attacked him more severely than ever, when he drew a pistol and fired, wounding WHELAN severely. He was brought to the Eleventh Ward Station-house where his wounds were dressed. The shots took effect in his head, and were of a dangerous character. HERSHMAN was also arrested by Officers TILLEY and HACK, of the Eleventh Ward, who were immediately on the spot. The mob was so great in a few moments, and of such a character, that Officer HACK had to change clothes with the prisoner for fear of an attack. WHELAN was arrested a few weeks ago and sentenced to six months in the Penitentiary for assault and battery, but was pardoned the day before election by the Governor on a petition which was sent him signed by several Democratic Aldermen and Justices.

Gun and Ship News.

BARK MILFORD.—A letter received by ELWOOD WALKER, from Southampton, 7th, states that the weather was fine, and the bark was lying in a good position, and with speedy assistance could be got off. She has 450 tons of coal on board. The storm of yesterday, it was thought, may have affected the vessel unfavorably.

QUICK PASSAGE.—The ship William Woodbury, Captain MCLELLAN, hence at Mobile, made the run in the extraordinary short time of seven days, from port to port. Some of our contemporaries are wrong in stating the passage in nine days. The William Woodbury is a fine vessel built at Portland in 1856, and owned there.

NAVAL.—The United States sloop-of-war Dale, was at St. Paul de Loando, western coast of Africa, on the 9th of October. A letter from an officer on board of her says:

It would seem that the French have gone actively and deeply into the slave trade. It is believed here that the French Government had actually made a contract with an agent or factor at Congo for twenty thousand negroes, at thirty dollars per head.

The Seventeenth Ward returns were then taken up, but only seven Districts were canvassed, when the Board took a recess.

☞ A movement is in progress to procure a mitigation of the sentence of ROSENZIG, the murderer of SWANSTON. Ex-Judge SWAYNE has drawn a petition to the Governor, in his behalf, urging that the boy was drunken and irresponsible when he committed the crime. It has already obtained several signatures. President KING, of Columbia College, was asked to intercede with his brother and sign the petition. In a letter to Judge SWAYNE he states that being unacquainted with ROSENZIG, and sentence having been passed, he thinks an application to the Governor would be useless without a certificate from the Judge before whom the lad was tried, setting forth that it might be a fitting case for the exercise of clemency. Without that he declines to sign the petition.

The Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening, President CLARKE in the Chair. The report recommending the Finance Department, in accordance with the requirements of the new Charter, was again brought up and read, and its consideration again postponed. It is to come up on Monday next.

The resolution concerning with the Comptroller to increase the salary of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department to $4,000 a year, was taken up.

Alderman TOOMAN opposed it, on the ground that $3,000 a year was enough for any office-holder in this City.

Alderman BURT said the Chief Engineer had not asked for the increase.

Alderman CLARKE favored the proposed increase, because, since Mr. Howard had held the office, the losses by fire had been 40 per cent less than during the administration of the former chief.

Alderman BURT said the decrease in the number of fires was chiefly owing to the fact that there was a Fire Marshal to investigate fair the causes of fires, closely, and thus operated as a check upon incendiaries.

Alderman OVERS thought the present salary sufficient.

Alderman TOOMAN said the chief cause of the decrease in the number of fires, or in the amount lost by them, was the activity of the insurance patrol, which cost the insurance companies about $40,000 a year. After some further debate, the vote was taken, and the resolution was adopted by a vote of 13 to 8. The proposal to raise the salaries of the City Inspector and the Street Commissioner to $3,000 a year, was made special order for Friday next, to which time the Board adjourned.

Judge Fine.

This gentleman still insists that he is the successor of Chief Justice GAZZAM in the Superior Court. He denies the right of the other Justices to decide the justice of his claim. Judge DUER having on Monday morning written him a note requesting him to call at the residence of the latter at 6½ o'clock P. M. to listen to the decision of the Judges, Judge FINE wrote the reply, which, with Judge DUER's note, we give below.

SUPERIOR COURT, Dec. 7, 1857.

SIR: You will oblige by coming to my house this evening at 6½ o'clock, that I may communicate to you the result of the deliberation of the Judges upon the question whether you are entitled to take your seat as one of their number.

If you have any legal advisers by whom you may wish to be accompanied, we shall not object to Mr. PECKHAM. Your ob't serv't, JNO. DUER.

No. 61 WALL-STREET, NEW-YORK, Dec. 7, 1857.

HON. JOHN DUER—Sir: Your note of this date was handed me by an officer of the Superior Court, to which I proceed to reply without delay. However much of pleasure I might derive, under ordinary circumstances, from calling on you at your residence, in compliance with an invitation to that effect, I must, for the reasons hereinafter stated, at present respectfully decline. I am more than surprised that I am requested to enter your dwelling after the very singular treatment I received at your hands, in your own house, on Wednesday last; that I should have been left standing in your hall, in your own presence, and shown even that most cheap and common politeness of being asked to take a seat, struck me at first with much surprise. But your conduct in turning your back on me without an apology, walking into another apartment and shutting the door in my very face, without remark or explanation, leaving me to find exit to the street as best I might, is, in my opinion, utterly without excuse or justification. I do not think it would be tolerated in any society which a respectable public judgment would pronounce respectable. I cannot but regard this treatment as an intentional insult. I must, therefore, be excused from entering your dwelling on invitation or otherwise, until an ample apology shall have been made by a suitable apology. I will not a second time put myself in the way of receiving treatment so utterly unbecoming and unmerited, and which your station in life, and my own self-respect, prevent my meeting with prompt and instant resentment.

In regard to the result of the deliberations of the Judges on the question of my right to a seat in your Court, which I am summoned by your note to hear, I beg leave to state:

First—If it is favorable, there would seem to be no necessity of my chasing after the opinion; it could not help me.

Second—If it is unfavorable, I must then ignore that opinion. It certainly has not and could not have any binding authority. No case was before you and your associates for consideration by any process known to law. An opinion, therefore, would simply represent the individual views of several highly respectable gentlemen; and it may be, would also represent their prejudices.

I claim to be a Judge of the Superior Court by virtue of an election, and I hold the office by the same tenure as my associates. The law has prescribed the process and method of our creation. We are born of the suffrages of the people. My rights have no inception in unofficial determinations of Judges, and they shall not be concluded by them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT FINN.

Judge FINN sat beside Judges BOSWORTH and WOODRUFF on Tuesday, and was present again yesterday. The Fry and Bennett case was on trial and Judge FINN intimated to members of the bar that he would give a written opinion upon that case.

The worst feature in the position which Judge FINN occupies—not speaking legally but humanely—is the fact that Judge OAKLEY's colleagues upon the bench of the Superior Court after the death of their associate expressed the hope that the vacancy would not be filled, undertaking to fulfill all the duties of the deceased Justice for the rest of the term, so that his salary might be set apart for the benefit of the widow and family of the Chief Justice.

MEETING OF DENTAL SURGEONS.—An adjourned meeting of the Dental Surgeons of New-York and vicinity was held last night at No. 37 Bond-street. The Chairman pro tem. was Dr. COVELL, the Secretary, Dr. J. G. ADKINS. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and approved, the report of the Committee on Constitutional By-Laws was read and adopted. The report in question organizes a new Society. The first Dental Society of any importance in this City was organized at the Medical College in Crosby-street, in 1847, but expired about four years ago. It is now determined to form a new Society, and the meeting of last night was initiatory to that end. The object of the Society is the discussion of subjects connected with the profession, exhibition of improved instruments, &c.

Dr. CASTLE thought the Constitution of the Society was too democratic, inasmuch as it allowed "Tom, Dick and Harry," the rag-tag and bob-tail of the Profession—those who advertised complete sets of teeth for $25 and even $10 per set, when every dentist knew that the materials alone could not be purchased for either of those sums. This gave rise to some discussion, in which Dr. ROGERS, Dr. BALLARD and Dr. CLARKE took part. Finally, a motion to reconsider the report of the Committee, was adopted, and it was taken up, section by section, and readopted without debate. The signatures of twelve members having been appended to the report, the election of officers was proceeded with. Dr. ADKINS was appointed Secretary and Dr. W. B. ROGERS Treasurer, the election of a Chairman to take place at each meeting. A Business Committee was next chosen, consisting of Dr. C. W. BALLARD, JOHN ALLEN and L. COVELL. Subjects for discussion at the next meeting were proposed; Dr. FRANKS and Dr. ROGERS made some observations on the Treatment of Fangs, and the meeting adjourned.

GRAND LODGE A. F. A. OF NEW-YORK.—The following named gentlemen were installed as the Grand Officers of this Lodge on Tuesday evening:

W. G. Master—Nathan Nesbitt, Mount Vernon Lodge No. 18.

W. D. G. M.—James Heron, New-York Lodge No. 2.

W. G. Secretary—Thomas Minns, Malden City No. 22.

W. G. Treasurer—Robert McCarll, Brooklyn City No. 3.

W. G. Chaplain—John W. Heape, Valley Forge No. 20.

W. G. C.—Wm. Mackey, Malden City No. 22.

W. G. A. C.—Samuel Wallace, Henry Clay No. 40.

W. G. F. T.—John Ballantine, Washington No. 2.

W. G. O. G.—Wm. Bell, New-York No. 2.

This Order at the present time numbers upward of six thousand members in this City, and is in a most prosperous condition.

FIRE IN WATER-STREET.—Last evening, about 9¼ o'clock a fire was discovered in the wholesale drug warehouse of Messrs & Co., No. 49 Water-street, near Old-slip. The alarm was immediately given, but the firemen, in consequence of a very heavy fog existing, found it somewhat difficult to find out the exact quarter of the fire, which in the meantime continued to burn with increased rapidity. Engine Companies Nos. 21, 29 and 32 were first upon the ground and quickly subdued the flames, not, however, before some $1,000 damage was done, which is covered by insurance, but in what Companies we could not learn.

[illegible]

Wealth and Want—A Grand Example.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is a criminal supposition to assert that one-half of this City, as a class, either oppress or neglect the poor. A glance over the statistics of New-York will show not only that the hand of poverty is in every one's pocket, but that, in fact, the wrong is the other way—the poor oppress the rich.

Affluence, competence, and the inferior degrees of social comfort, as a rule, come from industry and integrity; while other destitutions can be generally traced to improvidence, profligacy or crime. Yet the cause and sympathy that are lavished on those who, by mistaking the channels which would have brought them to a state of opulence, have resorted to the commission of crime, or have neglected to pursue a good course, are, in proportion, far greater than those which would make a good use of the means which every family would, if properly managed, possess in the honorable way which is open to all who are willing to pursue it.

The remedy of enforcing intelligence, honesty and industry, is not, perhaps, within the province of any one class of society, but it is within the province of every family, and of every individual, to do what they can to promote the cause of good morals, and to discourage the opposite, by the example of their own conduct, and by the influence of their own opinions.

With all these discouragements, however, there is a wealthy class in this City, now daily increasing, which, by its example, has contributed much to the cause of good morals, and to the relief of the poor. The example of this class is gaining in extent, and it is to be hoped that it will become so general as to include the entire community. This class, I mean, is the class of the industrious, who, by their own exertions, have acquired a competence, and who, by their example, are teaching to an amount that can be felt, the value of industry, economy and good morals. This class, I mean, comprises the rich men of the Ward. They are distinguished for their industry, as a class, and for the liberality with which they contribute to the poor, and the sympathy they have for the poor. The willing sacrifices of Christian men, and the economical habits of their wives, are contributing much of their means to aiding institutions, and to the relief of individuals; but they continue their industry without stint or relaxing, and the poor are bountifully benefited with their means.

Such things ought to be known, that the people's sake and the credit of the class to whom honor is due, may be duly appreciated. I hope that this statement is only the forerunner of a long and valuable series of the Ward's benefactors.

[illegible] POLITICS, TRADE AND FINANCES.

Important Messages from Gov. Wise.

Governor Wise, of Virginia, has transmitted three messages to the Legislature of that State: the first upon the present commercial crisis; the second upon the repeal of the usury laws; and the third on miscellaneous subjects. The messages possess the entire space of our Richmond exchanges of Monday. The Governor does not leave the subject any of the leading topics of the day, in so far as they bear upon affairs in Virginia. His views, though they may not always be considered sound, will nevertheless command respect. They are, in many instances, bold, striking and original, and the messages are constructed with the Governor's wonted ability. We give below an extended synopsis of these documents.

FIRST MESSAGE.

[illegible] devoted to financial matters, the Governor enumerates the causes of the existing pressure, the conduct of operations, and makes recommendations, in case it shall derive legislative authority, for the future, and relieving the present.

[illegible] PROMOTION OF GOLD FOR SPECIE CAPITAL.

[illegible] financial legislation.

[illegible] recently large expansion in the production of prices, in currency, and in speculation, has occurred. A state of overtrading, [illegible] and stagnation and [illegible] has succeeded. The currency and credit of the country are [illegible] and they are [illegible] This last nearly all [illegible] immediately and [illegible] in value, and no sufficient [illegible] the business, progress, too, [illegible] and in the powers of production [illegible] No allowance [illegible] of steam, of chemistry, [illegible] of concentrated [illegible] has generated human operations, [illegible] far beyond any creation of [illegible] history. The demand for gold [illegible] to supply the attenuated [illegible] of the pigmies of [illegible] have grown up [illegible] their hands, and their supply and support are great, beyond anything known [illegible] experience. Their supply and support [illegible] to their power of production. [illegible] canals, railroads, mountain [illegible] continents of Europe [illegible] agriculture—not mere laces and [illegible] luxuries of living—required more [illegible] than the world ever required before. [illegible] supply of gold, then, ought not to [illegible] to enhance the price of every [illegible] rather to cause gold to fall so [illegible] as the demands [illegible] and powers of production of every [illegible] had increased in proportion.

[illegible] increase of the production of gold [illegible] greatly greater amount of it to be [illegible] the ordinary utensils of life [illegible] for currency.

Again: Just at the moment when the production of gold was so increased, it was all called for by the extraordinary events of the principal powers [illegible] external exchanges required [illegible] and added to these wants, war broke out between Russia, England and [illegible] the European and Asiatic [illegible] and the revolution in India has followed [illegible] the peace of the Crimea. A [illegible] going on for years between the [illegible] and France, each grasping at the spoils and striving to hold "the barometer of exchanges" for the world, while the Governments of Russia, Austria, Prussia, and all the other powers [illegible] are collecting their resources and [illegible] to prepare for any contingency of warfare, which may arise. England and [illegible] have the power to purchase up the [illegible] as it is produced, and they have bid [illegible] away from us. It was more [illegible] in Europe than it was wanting here; it [illegible] here, out of the reach of our wants now, and to get it back a premium must be paid by us [illegible] that which was paid to take it away. We ought not, then, to have expected so large an amount of specie to remain in our country, and to become an enlarged basis for increase of banking capital and circulation.

Yet, the popular belief, the general delusion was that we were to have a superabundance of gold; [illegible] to be got for digging without limit, and [illegible] to be a drag if not to begging in the [illegible] It was to become merchandise, and not [illegible] and be any longer money.

The consequence of this delusion should have been apparently, to lessen the amount and issue of paper currency. But, on the contrary, the demand [illegible] Circulation was greater than ever; and the [illegible] being here to supply the currency, 78 millions only being left in the public depositories of the country, there was a multiplication of banks, a vast increase of banking capital, and an [illegible] paper circulation of 214 millions. The [illegible] banks increased from 671, in 1843, the last specie suspension, to 1,416, by the 1st of January, 1857. The amount of banking capital now, [illegible] of private banking, is $370,634,666, and the total bank assets, including capital, was $1,324,016,452; exclusive of capital, was $953,[illegible] the amount of total banking liabilities was $[illegible]—leaving a total surplus of $450,[illegible] exclusive of capital; and the aggregate of immediate liabilities, i. e. of circulation, deposits and due to other banks, was $602,804,507; and the aggregate of immediate means, i. e. of specie, specie funds, notes of other banks and sums due from other banks, was but $177,404,692—leaving a deficiency of immediate means, on the 1st of January, 1857, of $[illegible]. Such was the degree of inflation and deficiency of immediate means the 1st January last.

EXTRAVAGANT APPROPRIATIONS OF CONGRESS.

Another reason for this excessive inflation of our currency is the speculation in the northwestern territory of the United States, brought on by corresponding grants to internal improvements by the General Government. For years past the Federal Government has been giving alternate sections of the public lands to the new States to construct railroads. These grants were turned over to the new State corporations, of banks and railroad companies; and these corporations have multiplied and speculated to an extent parallaled only by the Yazoo schemes of old.

For years the Congress of the United States, without caution, without debate or question, even by either house comparatively, has been going on in a course of extravagant appropriations to [illegible] and these have been partial particularly to the Northwest. What it is not [illegible] here to inquire, but such is the fact. While a watchful jealousy has guarded other branches of what used to be denounced as the corrupting American system of Federalism, this branch of it has been allowed quietly to grow into a policy which all have directly or indirectly, silently or expressly, countenanced and encouraged. States northwest of the Ohio have had a [illegible] of public improvements completed for them by individuals, have made millionaires for [illegible] Corporations have banked upon stocks [illegible] The land offices have [illegible] by speculators. Though circulation [illegible] has been excessively multiplied, yet the demand for money has been so increased as to [illegible] from 12 to 24 per cent. per annum. Our stocks and our money have gone there [illegible] the reward of the times; and are now [illegible] fall of the crisis. The speculation [illegible] Northwest and the gold diggings on [illegible] have inflated our currency, [illegible] which is now bursting, and [illegible] bonds into the market at a disparaging rate of discount.

[illegible] as ever to forget [illegible] representative is [illegible] or artificial [illegible] then immediately [illegible] of nature, which in [illegible] time makes a [illegible] for money and [illegible] value. At all times the specie [illegible] standard and the measure of any [illegible] the currency to the test of the [illegible] value, and, at first, far below the [illegible] In this crisis, the production of gold [illegible] the currency, and its export left not enough [illegible] to redeem the over-issue of paper circulation. The only redeeming power is in the [illegible] production of other things besides gold, [illegible] and being to us specie.

THE GREAT CENTRES OF TRADE.

[illegible] thirteen principal centres of trade, [illegible] financial and commercial relations [illegible] States. Two are primary, national centres—the one the importing, New-York; and the other the exporting centre, New-Orleans. The others all are but satellites and secondary as compared with these. In [illegible] ton, Philadelphia, [illegible] Charleston, [illegible] In the north [illegible] and St. Louis. On the [illegible] and Baltimore, in the northeast, operate upon the active commerce, and a large mining, manufacturing and agricultural interest. The centres of the southeast and south operate upon the export commerce and upon the planting interest. The group of centres in the prong of the Ohio and the Mississippi operate upon a large agricultural and mining interest, upon some manufacturing and upon the lake trade. St. Louis operates upon a large agricultural interest and the trade with the Indians and Santa Fe. San Francisco upon the Pacific, commerce and mining.

And the striking fact is exhibited, that the four great central, middle, Atlantic and Ohio front States, slaveholding, tobacco-growing and breadstuff-producing, agricultural and grazing States, full of iron and coal and copper for mining, Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky, have no centres of their own, but are dependent upon centres around them, north and south, east and west!

DETRIMENTAL POSITION OF THE FOUR MIDDLE SLAVEHOLDING STATES.

The Governor here introduces lengthy statistics, generalizing the facts reported by the Secretary of the Treasury up to the 1st of January last, and showing the effect of the operation of these centres relatively upon other States, as exhibited by the relative condition of the banks. He makes the following deductions:

I have grouped Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky together, because they have no centre common to each, and no centre of their own, and because they have a homogeneity of trade. And we see that they have a balance in their favor, due by other banks, of $4,606,139

And, including that balance in their favor, the surplus of their total means over the deficiency of their immediate means is $7,181,372

Or, their surplus is 6¼ per cent. on their sum total of means $121,065,904

As compared with New-York, their surplus is as 6¼ to 4 per cent.; with Massachusetts, as 6¼ to 22¼; with the two combined, as 6¼ to 9¼. With the five New-England States, without centres, as 6¼ to 57; with New-York and the six New-England States, as 6¼ to 14; with Pennsylvania and Maryland, as 6¼ to no surplus of total means over deficiency of immediate means; with New-Jersey and Delaware, as 6¼ to less than 1½; with Pennsylvania, Maryland, New-Jersey and Delaware combined, as 6¼ is to less than no surplus! As compared with the four Northeastern States with centres, Massachusetts, New-York, Pennsylvania and Maryland, as 6¼ to 7; and as compared with the whole 11 Northeastern States combined, as 6¼ to 1 per cent. only of a surplus of total means over their deficiency of immediate means. This shows that this group of States has undoubtedly a large portion due them of the balance due by the great centre of New-York, and that in their means, individually and collectively, they are far above the average strength of the States with which they trade, and that the balance of trade is in their favor over a large proportion.

And the whole comparison shows:

1. That the capital employed in trade flows to the centres.

2. That it flows there in spite of the balance of trade.

3. It shows that this very fact of a balance in trade in favor of the States producing the raw materials, against the commercial centres, instead of being a strength, is a weakness in times of a money pressure. And

4. Above all, it shows that the best defence a State or people can have against the tax of paying exchange to centres all around them, and against the danger and dismay of having their surplus or balance of trade caught under the dead fall of hard times in centres outside of their control, is to build up centres of trade for themselves within their own limits. If Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee and Kentucky, had united to build up their own centre, they would not now have all their surplus or balance tied up in the vaults of New-York, Philadelphia and Baltimore—cities which will, of course, take care of their own people or themselves first.

The surplus capital will flow to the centre, because commerce is there most active; the dollar there can be turned over oftenest and make the most profit. There is the great storehouse of supply, and there is the great congregation of demand. And this is in spite of the balance of trade or the rate of interest on the use of money. No matter what is the rate of interest in New-York, a bill of exchange on that City will draw a premium from any place on this continent, because it is the centre of trade. Money is more valuable there than elsewhere. Some suppose that money is drawn from Virginia, for example, because the rate of interest there is seven, and our rate is six. If that be a cause, why does San Francisco, where interest is 36 per annum, not draw the money from the seven in New-York? On the contrary, we know that a bill at San Francisco on New-York will always command about 2 per cent. premium.

To come nearer—the banking interest in Ohio is from 12 to 15 per cent. Why don't that rate draw from New-York? It is because New-York is the centre, where importations are made, where supplies are obtained, where money is most in demand.

So, some suppose that the balance of trade against the centre will draw money away from the centre. On the contrary, it leaves the money there. Thus, when a merchant or producer here at Richmond sends $2,000 worth of flour or tobacco to New-York, and purchases only $1,000 worth of merchandise, he has a balance of course in his favor of $1,000. What does he do with that balance? Why, if he has a head on his shoulders fit to manage money, he will leave it there and not bring it home with him; because when he gets here he can obtain a premium from a bank or banker here for a bill of exchange on New-York—a thing which is too much rated as "specie funds." The bank here which buys in ordinary times, gets its full equivalent. But if it issues notes to buy it, which have to be redeemed. And when pressure comes, the notes are presented for redemption here; and to get the specie to redeem with, the bank has to present the bill of exchange in New-York; and when it goes there in a crisis it finds the drawee has suspended or failed. At all events, the very means it counted on as specie, turns into protested paper—protested at the centre for a balance due the circumference.

SPECIE BASIS FOR VIRGINIA RECOMMENDED.

A State like New-York may issue upon stocks because it has a "Clearing-House" to keep down circulation; but an agricultural State, whose commerce is not active enough to settle balances weekly, must have a circulation equal to its capital, and no basis except the specie basis can be made safe or sound.

If the Legislature then takes up the subject of a general Banking law, I would respectfully recommend:

1. That but one plan of banking be adopted.
2. That each Corporation be independent, and be not allowed to have a branch or branches.
3. That each be authorized to issue only two of notes to one of capital.
4. To issue three of notes for one of specie, and no more, under a forfeiture of charter.
5. To redeem all its issues in specie.
6. Be required to register all their notes issued, in some Government office.
7. To issue no note under $10.
8. To be separate from the State and its finances, except so far as to negotiate loans and to receive deposits of public funds.
9. To be limited in dividends to seven per cent., and to reserve all surplus over that per cent. for a contingent fund, to guarantee specie payment.
10. That greater governmental control be reserved over them to supervise their proceedings, and to prevent violations of their charters.
11. That whether the State owns stock in them or not, at least three of the Directors be appointed by the State to be sworn as Commissioners to report quarterly the condition of the bank; and that said Commissioners be not allowed to own stock in or to borrow from the bank while acting as Directors.
12. And that for sufficient cause the Legislature or the Executive should have power to institute proceedings to close the bank and put it in the course of liquidation.
13. That the banks be allowed to bank upon a limited amount, say one-half only of the deposits made in them.

A bank or system of banks thus limited would be safer to the people and better accommodate the commercial communities. And nothing short of some such limitations and restrictions can be relied on to guard the agricultural States from revulsions like that we are now suffering.

OPOSITION TO A NATIONAL BANK—CONFERENCE OF STATES PROPOSED.

We ought to guard not only against the revival of a national bank, but any system of banks which has arisen or resulted with like powers, and alike dangerous. The States themselves, without investing the General Government with any more powers than it has already, may cooperate in a plan to bring about uniformity in banking, and in regulating the currency. Their laws ought not to conflict, and they ought to consult the public good, by concurring in some agreement of legislation on those vital subjects. May not Virginia move in proposing a conference of the States, to [illegible]

[illegible] desirable and without encroaching [illegible] Constitution of the United States?

SECOND MESSAGE.

[illegible] THE REPEAL OF THE USURY LAWS.

The second message of Governor Wise is devoted specially to the subject of the usury laws of the State of Virginia. The Governor is hostile to their repeal. He thinks that the evil of the present times will not be unmixed with great good if it shall effectually prevent the raising of the legal rate of interest and the abolition of the usury laws. The Governor sends with his message to the Legislature a "triumphant refutation" of the arguments of JEREMY BENTHAM in a pamphlet on "free trade in money, or note-shaving, the great cause of fraud, poverty and ruin, &c., by JOSIE WARRILL of Rhode Island." We quote some of the Governor's reasonings in favor of usury laws. He says:

Interest on money is a devouring element; and these times will satisfy all that we cannot venture to transgress the law of the experience of ages, that 6 per cent. is as high an average rate as any people can afford to pay for its use. The business of legislation is to look to and conserve a regular and natural state of trade, and not to minister to and indulge a spirit of speculation; and above all, to restrict rather than to increase the power of money. Money was created by legislation for the convenience of the people, and it should not be allowed to be perverted from its uses, as a medium and standard of value, to their oppression. Money is powerful enough already, and can make its profits independent of loans. A money aristocracy is the most dangerous enemy of this Republic. No spirit of independence can withstand the depression of debt; and as long as man is man, "the borrower will be the slave of the lender." Trust, then, that no specious appearances or arguments will induce the General Assembly of Virginia to increase our legal rate of interest. And much more strongly do I urge that they should not repeal or relax our usury laws.

Money is the very subject of sovereignty, because it is its creature. It exchanges for everything else. It is that universally and inordinately demanded; that which must be had, as the only tender in payment of debts; and it is that which maintains government itself. It is common to all other subjects of value in every way that they are not common to each other or to it. It may and ought to be, then, the subject of legal regulation where other property may not be and ought to be regulated by law. And to allow parties to bargain for their own rates is to repeal the usury laws, and at the same time to throw an obstruction in the way of business. I trust, therefore, that one good effect of this money crisis will be to prevent the raising of our rate of interest and to prevent the repeal of our usury laws. I have refrained to urge the moral considerations against their repeal, because some of the best of men are involved in the error of this mistake. But the moral reasons against repeal are incalculable. One of the most immoral effects of the abolition of usury laws would be to depress all the investments in State securities already made at 5 and 6 per cent. Unlimited usury would raise the rate of interest so high that no one would think of investing in bonds drawing only 5 and 6 per cent. interest. The investments already made would sink so low in the market that the faith of the State would be broken, as by a dishonorable repudiation itself. And no new bonds could be sold, except at a rate so high that no people could bear the taxation necessary to complete public works or to support public credit.

THIRD MESSAGE.

STATE INTERFERENCE IN RELIGIOUS MATTERS.

The third message of Governor WISE to the Virginia Legislature, is on miscellaneous subjects. He commences in the following original style:

It has not been for the want of reverence for religion, or that I have been unmindful of God's providence to our people, that I have omitted to observe the mere form and fashion of executive messages, to acknowledge Divine Goodness. I have purposely omitted to do so, for the same reason that I have, on every occasion when called on by the clergy or others, declined to recommend or appoint a day of thanksgiving. The Mayor of Alexandria lately addressed me on that subject, and I returned for answer the letter, a copy of which is herewith communicated. I declined for the reason that the state officers have no authority or power to interpose in religious matters belonging exclusively to private individuals, and their voluntary church organizations. We are a Christian people, recognizing the Christian law, in our baptism, in the naming of our children, in the sanction of our oaths, around our family altars, in keeping the Sabbath day, in the Courts of justice, in our ideas and observances of common morality and decency, in marriages and in burials—from the cradle to the grave, in our whole lives and laws. But there is no church establishment, and ought to be none; and there ought to be no meddling of the State with matters of religion and faith, except to protect and defend the freedom of conscience and voluntary worship, and to enforce sound morality and common decency. This hinders us not, but rather sets us free to praise God in our own way. Any recommendation of worship from the State or its officers, in any form, is to some extent a constraint upon the people, who have forbidden by their Constitution the intermeddling with such matters by political power. Politics and religion ought not, in any way, to be brought into contact. They pollute and destroy each other. Two of the worst evils of the times are political religion and religious politics. I am not constituted and appointed to handle God's holy things, and I will not dare hypocritically and cantingly to huckster them in the market of popularity among men.

FINANCES OF VIRGINIA.

It appears, from the financial statement, that after reducing the floating or temporary debt, in the fiscal year ending the 30th of September, 1857, by the amount of $370,266 68, the balance in the treasury on that day was $37,124 81; and these two sums approximate the estimate of the late Auditor by $125,060 51, the balance in the treasury on the 1st of October, 1856, making up the difference in the estimate and the result.

The annual report of the First Auditor shows the present condition of Virginia finances and his estimates for the next two fiscal years. The treasury will require no increase of taxes; the temporary debt is reduced to about $770,000 from $1,659,000 in the last two fiscal years; and for any deficiencies in the next two fiscal years, Governor WISE recommends the authority to issue treasury notes to the amount of $500,000. The chief burden of the public debt falls on the current year of 1857–'58, or that measure would not be necessary.

THAT TAX ON OYSTERS.

Governor WISE is still troubled with a desire to increase the revenue and to make the taxes equal and uniform throughout the Commonwealth. He renews the proposition to impose a tax on oysters in the following terms:

The State has, at the lowest estimate, 2,000 square miles of bottoms and beds of sea coast, and bay, and rivers and creeks and harbors, covered with the rock and matrix of these shell fish. In other words, we have 1,580,000 acres thus covered; and allowing one-eighth of a bushel to every square yard there are at least 784,000,000 bushels of oysters in the natural beds of Virginia. This is a jus publicus which the circuit and supreme courts of the United States have again and again decided to belong to the State. She cannot regulate and control the trade and navigation in these oysters, but she may regulate and control and make a revenue out of the catching and taking of them. About 96,000 tons, in all sorts of vessels, boats and canoes and skiffs, are employed in taking and carrying them away from their natural beds. Allowing on an average 15 bushels only to the ton, and ten trips a year, each trip will take and carry away 150 bushels per annum—making in the whole at least 14,400,000 bushels taken and carried away per annum. I am confident that the real number of bushels is nearer 30,000,000, but take the smallest amount, and they are worth at the oyster rocks 33⅓ cents per bushel, $4,800,000. About one-fifth are taken by our own citizens, say $1,000,000 and $4,000,000 by citizens of other States against our laws.

This immense amount is annually taken by citizens of other States, because there are no means whereby to enforce our laws, either as to who shall take oysters, or as to the time when they may be taken, or as to the mode of taking them. All these regulations are now imperative, and they are all important, in order to prevent the destruction of this great source of wealth. The oyster is immensely prolific. It is supposed that the mother oyster spawns about 3,000,000 every year, in the month of May generally, in our climate. Allowing five-sixths of the spawn to be swept away by tides and to be devoured by fish, every mother deposits around or near her about half a million per annum. The taking of oysters at the time of spawning destroys far more than are taken; but if the taking of them is properly guarded, they are indestructible, and will be a perpetual source of wealth, owing to their prolific reproductiveness. It takes about three years from the spawn for them, in favorable beds, to be fit for market.

[illegible] of depriving a resident [illegible] citizen [illegible] Fourth—Require every citizen who desires to take oysters, to obtain a license from the clerks of the County courts or from proper revenue officers in a certain service upon paying a small per diem or per year for as many tons as the person may choose to employ in the trade, from the 31st of August to the 1st of May in each year; discriminating between the tonnage of large and small vessels, as the former cannot make so many trips as the latter, and between vessels large enough to run to the markets, and boats, canoes and skiffs and all small craft which are obliged from their size to sell near the place where the boats are employed. The oysters must be taken by means of tonnage in one form or another, and a tax on tonnage, therefore, may be made to reach every conceivable case. Paying the license on tonnage will authorize the person to take as many as can be taken by the amount of tonnage licensed without cost or trouble of any measurement or count whatever, and the rate per ton licensed only will have to be collected, and an inspection only by cutters will be required to see that none take oysters who have no license.

Fourth—Organize a revenue service of few steamers, well manned and armed, to regularly visit the oyster beds, and see that those who take have license, and that those who are not citizens do not take; and if they purchase and carry away, that they have bills of lading from citizens from whom they purchased, and who were licensed to take them. Two boats will be sufficient. The kind of steamers required will cost each about $15,000, and the cost of running, repairs and insurance of each per annum will be about $3,000. After the first cost of $30,000, the annual expense will be, at the maximum, not more than $60,000. A reasonable tax would be a fee for license equivalent to, from three to five cents per bushel. On the calculation that each ton would take fifteen bushels a trip, and make ten trips a year, of tax to carry away 150 bushels each trip, or at the minimum rate per bushel, each ton would be taxed $4 50. Every ton engaged in the trade can easily afford to pay $5 tax. If 96,000 tons are employed, $5 a ton would yield the Commonwealth $480,000 of revenue per annum.

Fifth—Require this cutter force to perform police duty, especially in guarding our coast against the stealing and running away of our slaves. If the licences would barely pay the expenses of this service, that object alone is sufficient to put such a law into force, besides the end of securing the monopoly of the oyster trade to our own citizens, and of preserving the oysters from destruction.

Sixth—Besides the oyster beds, the planting grounds are all below low water mark, and belong to the State, and a large revenue may be derived from marking them off by metes and bounds, and renting them out for the State, as is profitably done by other States.

If it be feared that the scheme is impracticable by State officers, the Legislature has but to grant corporate powers to a company to collect revenue from this source, within a maximum and minimum limit, and I have no doubt that a large bonus can readily be got for the privilege. The oyster banks will pay a better bonus than the banks of a paper currency. An oyster mine is a better source of profit to labor than any known mine of coal, copper, silver or gold. If our oyster beds had been mines of metals, they would not have been so neglected by legislation as a source of revenue.

THE ARMS SENT TO BALTIMORE AT ELECTION TIME.

The Governor alludes to the large stand of arms possessed by the Commonwealth—sufficient for 100,000 men at a moment's warning; and while on this subject he says:

I will take occasion to inform you that lately the Governor of Maryland applied to me, as Chief Executive of Virginia, to lend to that State a portion of the public arms, for reasons which he states in the accompanying letters, and which appear in his accompanying correspondence with the Mayor of Baltimore. His purpose was avowed to protect the freedom of elections and the peaceful exercise of the elective franchise in the State whose laws he is bound to see faithfully executed, and the safety of whose people he is bound to defend. He was the judge of the necessity which called for the exercise of conservatorial powers, and he declared the want of arms to keep the peace, and asked the comity of a loan of two thousand muskets from the State of Virginia for the purpose of protecting the safety of the people of a sister State in the enjoyment of the most sacred right of American freemen. With some knowledge of the necessity for this call, and a full knowledge of my powers, duties and responsibilities, I did not hesitate to grant the request; ordered the arms to be delivered to the agent sent to take them on with dispatch, who receipted for them; they were sent, were not used, and have been returned in good order, without loss, cost or charge to the State of Virginia.

FREE NEGROES IN VIRGINIA.

A great difference of opinion has been caused as to the best means of disposing of this class of the population. The Governor says:

"What is to be done with them? is the question, and it is difficult to settle it justly and to our satisfaction. Several modes have been proposed. One is to send them, in one exodus, out of the State, to the non-slaveholding States of the Union. I doubt both the policy and the justice of this plan. Its reason assigned is, in a vindictive spirit, to teach Abolitionists better how to appreciate the nature of the negro. But that spirit, always blind, is apt to mistake in this, and the result would be rather to make so many missionaries among the foes to our institutions and to our people, to harden them against us rather than to convert them in our favor. Besides, they would, on this plan, have to be sent North to a climate not suited to their habits or natures; and it would be harsh thus to subject them to wholesale dispersion, disease and extinction. Such is their fate in Free States and in cold climates. They are not fit for freedom or frost, unless they are among friends who will provide for them; and slaveholders, at last, are the best friends to the African race, and their climate and location are most kindly to their natures and habits. It would be more humane, and more just to them, to take from them their liberty at once, and sell them wholesale into Slavery, without their consent. But the moral sense of our people would revolt at a violation of individual and personal rights like this, and no such usurpation would be tolerated by public sentiment. What then?—if they ought not to be sent North to Free States and the tender mercies of fanatics and frost, nor to the South and Slavery? The answer is, that we ought to colonise as many as we can in Liberia, to take back under masters as many as are willing to return to the patriarchal protection of Slavery; to encourage the virtuous and industrious among them, by seeing that they are compelled to learn valuable trades and arts; and to reform our penal code so as to punish capitally certain of their higher offences; to punish their secondary offences with solitary imprisonment; and to condemn the minor offenders and the idle to labor on the public works. A code of discipline would soon rid us of all the vicious and dissolute, and retain to us the trustworthy, the virtuous and industrious.

I submit to the Legislature whether the separate tax upon them for colonization purposes is constitutional. The law was passed before the new Constitution went into operation, and the Constitution provides that all taxes shall be equal and uniform. Now this is not equal and not uniform—it is special and partial, and on one class alone; and capitation tax is provided only to be levied on white male inhabitants of 21 years of age. Under this law $7,000 per annum is raised from free negroes, and about $1,000 per annum only is expended for its professed purpose of colonization. The balance goes into the general Treasury in addition to other taxes. I therefore recommend the repeal of this law levying this tax. I recommend, also, that a free negro be allowed in future, after a given day, to hold no land or real estate beyond a small number of acres for a homestead; and no house or lot in a city or town; and that they be prohibited from lending money on interest to a white man at all; and from holding slaves.

FEDERAL RELATIONS.

And, lastly, the Governor alludes to Mr. BUCHANAN's election to the Presidency and its results, in the following terms:

During the last year an election for President and Vice-President of the United States was held, which portended results of the deepest interest to our people. They were saved from apprehended evils, which I will not recapitulate, in the order to avoid irritating the temper of the times. But at one moment a dark cloud shrouded the heavens of our happy country, and seemed ready to burst over and destroy our many rich and glorious blessings. Then it was that I felt called on to address to certain of the State Executives a letter of which the accompanying is a copy. Its objects were to defend the rights and liberties of the State of Virginia, to protect her people, and to save the Union. Happily the election itself accomplished these objects, and there was nothing more for me to do but to rejoice with every patriot in the result. The omens for the future are far better than they have been; and the warnings of the past are potent to dispel the clouds which were lately so dark and threatening. Our federal relations are now in safe hands, and [illegible] confidence I have there [illegible] by no zealous vigilance, [illegible] by mere election, or [illegible] sectional [illegible] that we all, in [illegible] a band of brothers, to [illegible] for this one [illegible] relations of our own blessed Commonwealth.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Monday, Dec. 7, 1857.

The disaffected "citizens" have got a candidate in the person of FREDERICK W. LINCOLN, Jr. Mr. LINCOLN is a Whig, one of the bits of flesh that cling to the skeleton of that defunct mastodon that figured in the pre-Adamite political ages under the name of the Whig Party. He is an excellent man, and would make a good Mayor. His friends advocate his election on the ground that he is "a Boston boy," and sneer at Mr. HALL because he has been here but five or six years, whereas he has not been here above four years. They say that Mr. HALL can't find his way about Boston without the aid of a map and a pilot. How that may be I know not, but I am very sure that if the principle which lies at the bottom of their opposition to Mr. HALL were carried out to its consequences, we should fare hard for local officers. The population of Boston does not belong by birth to Boston. Half of it is from the banks of the Liffey and the Shannon, the Rhe and the Rhine. Of the other half, a large portion, perhaps a heavy majority, is from all parts of the Union. Most of the old Bostonians are scattered over the face of the earth, from Roxbury to San Francisco, and from Calcutta to Aden and Suez. The native population went out of town years ago, and live in the shade of the lilac. They crowd the rural districts, and their places have been taken by others. To talk of "Boston boys" under such circumstances is to drivel. The meaning of such talk is, that Mr. HALL is one of the men who led the party that made Mr. SUMNER United States Senator. This is the unpardonable sin, the unforgotten and never-to-be-forgiven wrong in the eyes of men who have never been able to get down beyond the year 1853, and whose whining and canting produces the same effect on the human stomach that comes from a trip on a particularly boisterous day across the Straits of Dover. If the beloved disciple were a coalitionist, they would blackball him; but Judas they would support were he a sound Hunker, as it may be supposed he was.

However, Mr. HALL's friends can't complain a great deal. They display almost as much bigotry as their foes. They wouldn't vote for Col. HUMPHREY in Convention, because he is a distiller, though the liquor he makes is not of the sort that commonly enters into human consumption in the shape of a popular tap. I do not believe that a gallon of liquor of his manufacture ever found its way into American stomachs; and it is an article of faith with our temperance men that it is one of the rights of Yankees to export just as much liquor as they can contrive to dispose of. When the Maine Law was before our Senate, in 1852, one of its opponents proposed, by way of rider, to add a section to it forbidding the manufacture of all kinds of intoxicating beverages in Massachusetts; but this was bitterly opposed by the friends of the measure, who all voted against it, and caused it to be rejected. They averred that Massachusetts men had the right to manufacture, and to sell abroad articles, for selling which at home they would be sent to the house of correction. Now these very same men, or their associates, are so squeamish that they can't vote for the nomination of a man for Mayor who manufactures rum to be sold in Leghorn or Smyrna! They could, and did vote for the only Massachusetts man who supported the fugitive slave law, in spite of their intense Republicanism; but their fanaticism on rum will not permit them to vote for another and an abler man because he makes spirit for the thousand proper uses to which it is applied. There is neither sense nor consistency in their conduct. The impression has come to prevail that the leaders of the Hall party mean to make a special effort to enforce the Maine law in Boston, where it is now as dead a letter as the fugitive slave law in Worcester or Concord. This may give Mr. LINCOLN some votes that, under a liberal course of action by the other side, he could have had no hope of getting. It is wonderful how these fanatics, some of whom are the worst guzzlers in the country, and upon whose well-seasoned brains a hogshead of rum would make no more impression than a shower on Sahara—it is wonderful, I say, how they cling to the delusion that "legal suasion" is to bring about another golden age, whereas it has only made an age of glass, in the shapes of tumblers, bottles and demijohns. True, they succeeded in sending liquor-sellers to the houses of correction in cart-loads, just as the Revolutionary Tribunal sent people to the guillotine in batches, but as incivisme grew in France out of blood, so does rum-selling in Massachusetts grow, apparently, out of the imprisonment of liquor-dealers. The law and its enforcement have nowhere decreased the sale and consumption of liquor to the amount of so much as one glass. Yet it is purposed to "make an effort" to enforce the law in Boston, where it has effected nothing in the six years, almost, that it has been in existence.

The "People's" Party have nominated Mr. HALL, which increases his chances of an election not a little. In what "People" differ from "Citizens" is not known, but I suppose there must at least be a distinction between the two organizations.

Bay State Mills stock has been down to $30, being a loss of $970 per share. The expectation is that it will be down to the Vermont Central level, which is a good deal less than nothing. The Middlesex Company have a meeting to-day, which is expected to be a stormy one; but I am informed that reporters will not be admitted. [I have since heard that at the meeting, the proceedings of which were very interesting, a Committee of Investigation was appointed. I hope they'll find the stock, but I don't think they will.]

The official vote at the last State election has just been published, and is as follows for Governor:

Banks	60,887	Beach	21,760
Gardner	37,566	Scattering	372
Banks' plurality	23,211.

The returns from all the towns but one, and that one of the smallest in the State, were correctly made. Mr. BANKS led his ticket in every case, but Governor GARDNER and Mr. BEACH did not lead theirs. The official votes for Senator, which were formerly compressed into a couple of stickfuls of room, would now make more than a column and a half of your paper, which is a nuisance to our papers. There are but two Democrats chosen to the Senate, after all the expectations that were formed of political change from organic change.

Another Democratic paper is to follow the example of the Springfield Argus, and, as it cannot draw money from the pockets of its friends, will soon draw its last breath. Mr. CONSTOCK, who edited the Argus, is bent upon being FLETCHER WEBSTER's successor, as Surveyor of this port. There are some duties attached to this office, but Government, with a benevolent allowance for the incapacities of the politicians who are called to it, provides Deputies to perform them; and the Surveyor has only to draw his six or seven thousand a year, and to spend it, so that it is no presumption in any man to seek the place on the score of capacity. Mr. F. WEBSTER will probably prove too [illegible] Sunday morning, awakened Mr. William [illegible] man, wholesale oyster dealer on Fort-street, near Fort McHenry, and ordered him to open his house and give them something to eat, as they had been on a ducking expedition, and adding that they would give him some ducks. Mr. B. was alarmed, and hoping they would be satisfied if he complied with their requests, he called a colored man to give them as many oysters as they could eat. The fellows, after satiating their appetites, proceeded to the place which surrounds the house, and going up to the window of Mr. Bender's sleeping-room, drew a pistol and demanded that they should give them a good lot of money or his life. Mr. B. protested that he had no money about the house, and was in the act of turning away, when one of the party drew a revolver and shot him through the left side of the face. The same party proceeded to the new establishment of the Baltimore Gas Company, and committed another outrage. They went in at the principal gate, and there met one of the workmen named Charles Hogan. He was rudely approached by the party, one of whom demanded money, whereupon he told them that he had none. They then seized and searched him, without finding a cent. Enraged at the disappointment, one of them cried out to another to shoot the —— anyhow; and whilst Hogan turned to enter the establishment, he was shot. The ball penetrated the left side of the body behind the shoulder-blade, and the wound is of a dangerous character.

The Winter has set in at Lake Superior. The ice extends in a solid body from Copper Harbor to a point twenty miles above Eagle River, stretching out five miles into the Lake, and in places two to six feet thick. Copper was being drawn by teams upon the ice in Ontonagon Bay. The cold for a week and a half to these first days in the month of March was most intense. At the Bruce Mines, one day last week the mercury marked 30° below zero; at the Mountain 19°, and in Marquette 10°.

The Columbia and Sacramento Rivers, in our Pacific Territories, are placed for their salmon fishing. From the first of August to the end of December of the present year, a period of three thousand miles of salmon were salted on the Sacramento, and about forty thousand fish were sold fresh. At the last accounts from San Francisco it was expected that within the next thirty days 15,000 barrels would have been shipped thence to New-York, Australia and other markets.

Don Lino Vigil, brother of the present Sheriff of that county, was killed by E. S. DePew in a personal rencontre in the town of Taos. It seems that Mr. Pew, who was at the time the Sheriff and Deputy Marshal, had a warrant for the arrest of Vigil, the execution of which was resisted by the latter, who was at the time intoxicated. As Vigil advanced upon De Pew with a drawn bowie-knife, the latter drew his revolver and shot him, the wound taking immediate fatal effect.

The Boston Journal says upwards of [illegible] of plate in general circulation that business [illegible] as prosperous as was before the crash, upon a general suspension of the banks. NEWS OF THE DAY.

A report of the proceedings in Congress yesterday will be found highly interesting and important. In the Senate Mr. DOUGLAS delivered his [illegible] speech in opposition to the indorsement of the Kansas Constitutional Convention, which was followed by a long debate between that gentleman and Mr. BIGLER, which will repay perusal. The business done in the House was the election of Speaker—BANKSMAN, of Ohio, being the [illegible] selected.

Advices from Kansas inform us that Gen. [illegible], Provisional Governor by grace of the Lecompton Constitutional Convention, has issued two proclamations—one specifying the manner of [illegible] the election on the 21st instant, for submission of the Slavery clause of the Constitution, to [illegible], and the other providing for the election of State officers on the first Monday in January. It is understood that Secretary STANTON had issued a proclamation calling a special session of the Legislature, which was to meet on the 7th instant. At a mass Convention of the Free-State men at Leavenworth on the 27th ult., it was [illegible] resolved to put the Topeka Government in operation, and stand or fall by it, in case Secretary STANTON should decline to convene the Legislature. Affairs in Kansas are now assuming a more complicated shape than ever.

We received late last night from Washington a confirmation of the report mentioned above, that Secretary STANTON had called a Special Session of the Kansas Legislature, and also the announcement that, in consequence of this movement, the President has removed Hon. [illegible] to the Senate, as his successor, [illegible] Commissioner of Indian Affairs, [illegible] at present somewhere in the West, [illegible] for Mr. STANTON's removal in which he [illegible] instructions, and committed [illegible] calculated to disturb the peace of the Territory. The Senate did not take action on the nomination of General DENVER, and it is probable that an excited debate will take place in the [illegible] of the Senate.

We publish, in another part of this morning's impression, sundry extracts from three Messages, recently transmitted by Gov. WISE to the Virginia Legislature. The first Message is specially devoted to the financial crisis, which the Governor partly attributes to the immense increased production of gold, and partly to extravagant Congressional appropriations for years past. This Message then enters into a lengthy examination of the condition of the Banks of the United States in general, and of Virginia Banks in particular. The second Message is a protest against the repeal of the Usury laws. Among the subjects discussed in the third Message, are the old Wise idea of imposing a tax upon oysters as a means of increasing the revenue; the condition of Virginia finances; an explanation of the manner in which a stand of arms were sent to Baltimore at last election; and some other matters of general as well as local interest. Gov. WISE's productions are always readable, and those under consideration are especially so; his bold and original views will command the attention even of those who are most opposed to them.

Further intelligence from the Utah expedition states that on the 30 of November Col. COOK's command was one hundred and fifty miles west of Fort Laramie, proceeding as fast as possible towards the Winter quarters fixed upon by Colonel [illegible], on the Henry Fork of Green River. A rumor prevailed that BRIGHAM YOUNG intended to fight the troops this Winter, while there was a chance for an equal, or rather for an unequal conflict, and that before reinforcements could be sent out in the Spring, he would destroy all the Mormon possessions in Utah, and proceed to some other locality. This accords with rumors which have reached us through other channels.

During the fog which prevailed yesterday afternoon, a collision occurred at Sandy Hook between the steamers Ocean Wave and Long Branch, the former bound to this City and the latter to Ocean Port and Shrewsbury, in which both vessels were much damaged, and were with difficulty prevented from sinking. The force of the concussion was such that the passengers on both boats were prostrated, and many were badly bruised. The officers of the boats are not blamed.

WM. PADAN, a mulatto, former steward of the bark Pentuchet, has been arrested, charged with being one of the parties implicated in the late robbery of $10,000, in doubloons, stolen from the Pentuchet. He was found by two detective police officers at Farmingdale, L. I., where he had succeeded in getting up the impression that he was a runaway slave, and was fast gathering about him a host of earnest sympathizers and friends. He had in his possession $4,400 of the stolen money. He has been locked up in the Tombs for trial.

The Cattle Markets have been fairly supplied during the week. The receipts were some 500 less than last week, but quite sufficient for the demand, and the yards at Forty-fourth-street were barely cleared last evening, at last week's prices, except for a few of the best animals, which sold a shade better. The Swine markets are literally overstocked; the stock on hand, and hourly arriving, equals, or exceeds, any former period. The price of hogs has fallen off very materially during the past day or two, and continues to decline.

The General Produce Markets, yesterday, were comparatively quiet. The rainy weather checked out-door business. Flour was lightly dealt in, at about former rates. Wheat was somewhat brisker, yet not dearer. A moderate business was transacted in Corn, at easier prices. Rye was steady, while Barley tended downward; the demand for each was fair. Provisions were dull and heavy. No important change occurred in other branches of trade.

The Mechanics' Club of the American Institute held their first meeting for the winter season last evening, at the American Institute, Mr. STILLMAN, of the Novelty Works, in the chair. The subjects discussed were the adaptation of furnaces to fuel under steam-boilers, and the general construction of engines. The history of steam-engines on our American waters was exceedingly interesting.

The Annual Meeting of the stockholders of the New-York Central Railroad, for the election of Directors, was held at Albany yesterday, and the proceedings will be found reported elsewhere. The Board of Directors is nearly the same as last year.

Several parties appeared yesterday afternoon at the Essex Market Police Court to request Justice WOOD's attendance at the residence of CORNELIUS WOOD, the individual shot at Tammany Hall, and to receive his complaint against the person who, he alleges, shot him. The Justice being absent from Court the affidavit of complaint was deferred till to-day. WOOD charges PATRICK COONROY, alias "Pat Cockrunch," with the shooting. WOOD is under proper medical treatment and doing well.

The Board of Aldermen, last evening, concurred with the Commissioners to increase the salary of the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department from $[illegible] to $5,000 a year.

[illegible] of the Board of Aldermen, in [illegible] to the purchase of land on Ward's Island, [illegible] yesterday, but did no business.

A [illegible] was impanelled in the Court of [illegible] yesterday. Only one case, of [illegible] was tried.

The [illegible] and [illegible] meeting last night to forward the organization of a society of [illegible] craft for social [illegible] and improvement, Dr. ARDLER was chosen Secretary, and Dr. W. E. BONNER Treasurer. The Chairman is to be elected [illegible] evening to-morrow.

The Kansas Question in the Senate—Opening of the Campaign.

Yesterday's debate in the Senate was of marked interest and importance. Mr. DOUGLAS made a bold, manly, and high-toned opposition to the admission of Kansas under any Constitution which should not have previously received the sanction of its inhabitants. He insisted that this submission of the fundamental law to the popular vote, was absolutely required by every principle of Republican justice, by the pledges of the Nebraska bill, and the Cincinnati Convention, and by every consideration of policy and good faith. He expressed his satisfaction that the President had refrained from making the admission of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution an administration measure, and had not recommended such action in his Message to Congress. Indeed, he referred to that document for proof of the fact that the President himself was in favor of permitting the people of Kansas to vote upon any Constitution which may be offered for their acceptance.

The Lecompton movement found a zealous champion in Senator BIGLER, of Pennsylvania, who judiciously avoided, however, any argument upon the merits of the question, and confined himself to a personal attack,—which was in very bad taste and still worse policy,—upon Senator DOUGLAS, whom he sought to convict of inconsistency, by saying that, at a private caucus held at his own house, he was understood to have favored the admission of Kansas under Mr. TOOMBS's bill, without submitting it to the people at all. In the spicy running debate which followed, Mr. DOUGLAS gave this intimation a very flat denial, and even compelled Mr. BIGLER to withdraw it.

The discussion yesterday was significant. Mr. BIGLER disclaimed any authority to speak for the President,—and we have very little doubt that early in the campaign Mr. BUCHANAN will very cheerfully avail himself of the explanations of his position which were volunteered by Mr. DOUGLAS. We remarked yesterday the noteworthy neglect of the Message to recommend to Congress the adoption of the Lecompton Constitution;—and the remarks of Mr. DOUGLAS confirm our conviction that, with so cautious a man as Mr. BUCHANAN, this omission is not without significance.

Meanwhile, it is very curious to note the pertinacity with which political parties cling to this Kansas question, in the hope of making party capital out of it. The principal interest which the leading organs of both parties take in the subject, turns upon its shifting relations to their partisan ascendancy. The Republican presses are rejoicing at the course of WALKER and DOUGLAS,—not because that course is just and proper, but because it threatens to divide the Democratic Party and prepare the way for a Republican President. The Democratic papers regret the same action for the same reason. Neither side acts upon any settled principles or from any paramount regard for the public good. What will be its effect upon our party, is the only question which partisan politicians think it worth while to ask concerning any political measure.

We do not imagine that the differences between the President and some of the leading Democrats in and out of Congress is to have any very serious effect upon political parties. And still less can we see any reason to believe that it is in any event to strengthen the Republican Party or improve its chances of success in 1860. The President seems, indeed, strangely blind to what the whole country perceives to be the true party policy of his Administration. He has it in his power to take from the Opposition everything which has given them strength hitherto. The Republican Party was created by the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and was built up by the insane Kansas policy of President PIERCE and the violence of the Pro-Slavery faction both in Kansas and at Washington. It cast the enormous vote, and reached the prodigious strength which it exhibited last Fall, because the people believed that Slavery would be forced upon Kansas if the Democratic Party should succeed. To break the force of this apprehension the Democratic Party committed itself fully and unreservedly to the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty, and pledged itself that the people of Kansas should have full and perfect liberty to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way. In accordance with this pledge, President BUCHANAN, as he states in his Message, authorized Governor WALKER to declare, in "general and unqualified terms," that the people should have an opportunity to vote upon any Constitution that might be framed for their government. The whole country would be satisfied with the redemption of this pledge: and it is becoming every day more and more certain that it will not be satisfied with anything short of that.

The President is of opinion that the refusal to admit Kansas, except upon the submission of her Constitution to the vote of the people, will plunge the Territory into renewed agitation, and perhaps civil war. Pray, by whom is such a war to be commenced? Not by the people of Kansas, certainly, for nine-tenths of them are in favor of such a submission. The President—unless he discards utterly the information of his own officials in Kansas—must be perfectly aware that the danger is on the other side;—that the refusal to submit the Constitution to the popular vote will arouse the most intense indignation among the inhabitants, and in all probability involve them in open and armed resistance to the usurpation. Governor WALKER has assured the President that this would be the certain and inevitable result,—that no power on earth could force this Constitution upon the people, and that the attempt to do so will assuredly involve Kansas and the border States in all the horrors of civil war. Secretary STANTON has expressed the same opinion. Does the President attach no importance to the assurances and views of men so thoroughly acquainted with the spirit and temper of the people of Kansas as these gentlemen are?

The point presented in this matter is too plain for argument, and we cannot believe that an act requiring the submission of the Constitution to the popular vote, as a condition for the admission of Kansas, will meet any serious opposition from members of the Democratic Party. And it is because we believe that such a bill will be passed that we do not [illegible] from the existing disorders, any important changes in the relations of the political parties of the country.

The Treasury Report and the Financial Crisis.

Just two centuries ago, in the Fall of 1657, the Duke DE CHAULNES applied to the Estates of Lorraine for a "gratuity" of 2,000,000 livres, to be by them paid to their liege lord Louis XIV., the first monarch of Christendom. The Estates undertook to discuss the proposition, when the Duke sent them word that if they haggled over the matter, he would refuse them the honor of paying the money at all, which threat so terrified those loyal persons that they immediately cashed the regal draft. It had never so much as entered into their minds to conceive of asking what was to be done with the money. This was the sort of financiering in which that great Protectionist COLBERT delighted, and which finally brought the throne of France to the earth. And nothing could more strikingly illustrate the change which two hundred years have brought over the political and the economical relations of mankind, than a comparison of this story with the language and the tone with which the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States approaches the similar subject of a national loan in the presence of the representatives of the sovereign people.

Mr. COBB does not threaten to reject the boon which he craves, unless it be granted without debate. On the contrary he sets forth, at considerable length, the causes which have brought the National Treasury to its present precarious position, and he is at very great pains to prove that the issue of twenty millions of Treasury notes will not merely relieve the Department over which he presides, but greatly facilitate the exchanges of the whole country. His suggestion is at once practical and timely, and we cannot doubt that it will receive the immediate and favorable attention of Congress. The notes which he proposes to issue will reinforce our monetary circulation with an accession of authentic and unquestionable value, and will, in this way, do as much, perhaps, as it is in the power of the Government to do towards the recovery of our industry and our commerce. For there can be no doubt that Mr. COBB takes firm ground when he questions the constitutional right of the Government to expand its expenses, and to enter upon new and extensive enterprises for the purpose of distributing the pence of Peter into the pockets of Paul. The only salvation of a nation, or of an individual, from pecuniary embarrassments, is to be sought in active production—in an excess of creation over consumption; and the public works in which a Government can properly engage are almost exclusively of an unproductive kind. Such, for instance, are the vast majority of the works which have been carried on in the capital and in the provinces of France during the last few years, under the policy of the present Emperor; and the remarkable phenomenon which has been observed in France, of a steady rise in the price of all the necessaries of life produced by agriculture, amounting to an advance of 40 per cent., since the year 1853, has been attributed by French economists of distinction to the large proportion of the profits of French industry yearly absorbed in these unproductive enterprises. The annual accumulations of France are estimated at something over $240,000,000, of which the greater part formerly passed at once into the agricultural and manufacturing interests of the nation, but is now diverted either into the coffers of the Treasury, or into the problematical investments of the Exchange.

In the public property of Great Britain, her ships-of-war, forts, military equipments and material of war, palaces, government docks, &c., it is estimated that a sum equal to the whole national debt is now represented. Nothing could be more foreign to the practice, or more irreconcilable with the true interests of this country, than any steps in this direction. Our productive resources have already suffered quite enough from the diversion of capital into speculative channels. In a great number of cases our railways have been constructed on principles exactly opposed to those which governed the Pitt policy of public loans in England: they have been built for the benefit of posterity by a tax on the present generation, and though they have added substantially to the permanent wealth, they have injuriously affected the temporary financial equilibrium, of the country. How to restore that equilibrium is the leading question of the hour, and a satisfactory answer to it is more likely to be found by the active efforts of individual character and capacity, in reestablishing the system of commercial credit, than by any tentative experiments of the Government.

Mr. COBB is of opinion that a general Bankrupt Law, directed against the careless and improvident managers of Banks and Railways, would contribute to so desirable a result. To this opinion of the Secretary, it is objected that any Bank could easily evade the penalties of such a law by dying under one name to-day to revive again to-morrow under another. This is true, but it is true only of small and purely speculative concerns, which must always play an insignificant part in the finances of our country. We need protection, not from the rascality of petty operators, but from the recklessness and avidity of men who control powerful institutions and can be immediately brought under the wholesome fear of legal consequences. It is, perhaps, a melancholy fact, but it is a fact not to be overlooked in legislation, that the morals of commerce sorely need the vivifying heat and light of the law. There have been voices already raised in London, not without reason, to prophesy serious disorganizations of British commerce if the example which the Cabinet of Lord PALMERSTON have just set of bending the law of the land to the exigencies of a commercial crisis shall be suffered to pass quietly into a precedent; and no man who has carefully studied the origin and progress of the recent pressure in this country, can hesitate upon the conviction that a certainty of bankruptcy held up before the banks as the penalty of suspension would have obviated our most serious difficulties. It would have fought the battle of October in the month of July, and would have saved the credit of the banks by compelling bank directors into caution, prudence, and a legitimate system of business.

The circulation of money in any country is not a check, but a stimulant and sign of industry, and the extraordinary increase of the circulation of the American Banks in the last few years simply indicates a healthy increase in the national demand for money, which has been met by a speculative and reckless supply, which has enhanced the number of buyers, and raised the price without raising the value of our productions. The quality of our money has declined so that gold and silver have been driven out of the country. The tables of the Secretary show that in 1857, after eight years of California and Australia, the proportion of specie to paper in the circulation of the country was seriously less than in 1849. In 1849 our Banks presented one dollar of specie for every five of paper. In 1857 they present one dollar of specie for every seven of paper. Louisiana, it is true, stands out from her sister States with a currency strengthened by a show of one dollar of specie for every three of paper, which is also the working proportion maintained by the Bank of England during the first quarter of the present year.

The practical regulation of our financial system has definitely lodged itself in the hands of the several States. It rests, therefore, with the people of the country, severely exercised as they now are by "calamities" which were precipitated upon us by the selfishness of fear, after being made possible by the folly and ignorance of selfishness, to apply decisive remedies to the ills we bear. The moral not less than the material future of the Republic, is largely involved in the action which shall be taken upon the existing disorders of the commercial world, and finance has become an affair of patriotic concern as well as a theme of political study.

An Edifying Spectacle.

Persons who are surprised at the enormous amounts of money expended under pretence of providing for the City Government, have read with care, we trust, the report of the discussions in the Board of Aldermen reported in the TIMES of Tuesday morning. A proposition was made to stop the expenditure of money upon the Central Park. Alderman FULMER was in favor of it, because he had expected to have the appointment of two hundred men upon the work, and was told he could have but ten! "He was not satisfied, and hoped the resolution would pass." Alderman COUTZEN had hoped the poor might find work on the Park, but none but Black Republicans were appointed, and he hoped the resolution would pass. Alderman OWENS had not been able to put more than seven men on the work, and many of the Democratic Aldermen had had few appointments. Alderman MOESNOOS thought the Commissioners of the Park were "humbugging the laborers, many of whom, from the work they were put on, breaking stone by the yard, could not earn fifty cents a day." Alderman STRANG had sent many men there to get work, but they were disappointed. And so of all the rest:—and finally the affair culminated in the adoption of the following resolutions, offered by Alderman MOESNOOS:

Whereas, It is currently reported that the Central Park Commissioners are now, and have been, paying the laborers employed thereon at the rate of from three to five shillings per day; and

Whereas, Such a rate of payment is less than the average price paid for laboring men, and an outrage upon that portion of our community; therefore

Resolved, That the subject be referred to the Committee on Lands and Places, to inquire into and investigate, and that said Committee have power to send for books, persons and papers to assist them in their investigation.

The head and front of this reputed offence is that laborers are paid by the piece, and not by the day,—and that they, therefore, only receive what they earn!

Nothing can more clearly show the notion entertained of our City government than the fact that these Aldermen were ready to stand up and oppose a public work avowedly because they had not been able to get their favorites appointed, and because the workmen were paid only what they earned. This is a confession that these men regard the work of the City as simply affording an opportunity for public plunder. They vote fifty or a hundred thousand dollars to be expended upon the Park,—but only on condition that their political hangers-on shall be appointed and paid twice what they earn! These are the only "unemployed poor" for whom their sympathies can be excited.

GOVERNOR WISE ON OYSTERS.—Governor WISE has sent another Message to the Legislature of Virginia on the subject of oysters; in fact the Governor appears to be in a constant oyster stew; and when we consider the marvelous productiveness of the sea-coast of the Old Dominion, in the luxurious article of bivalves, his anxiety to make the oyster beds of his native State yield a revenue to the Government is not surprising. Although his proposition to levy a tax on oysters is for the sole benefit of Virginia, yet his recommendations that restrictive laws should be enacted to prevent the utter destruction of this favorite shell-fish, are of interest to the whole oyster-eating community. Oysters are one of the chief solaces of social existence in this country, and whatever tends to their preservation concerns not Virginia alone, but the entire Union. According to the estimate of Governor WISE, Virginia possesses an area of about 1,680,000 acres of oyster beds containing about 784,000,000 of bushels of oysters. It is estimated that the mother oyster spawns annually at least 3,000,000; yet notwithstanding this enormous productive power, and the vast extent of oyster beds, there is danger of the oyster being exterminated unless measures are adopted to prevent fishermen from taking them at improper seasons of the year. Governor WISE proposes to confine the oyster-catching business to citizens of the State exclusively, and to charge three cents a bushel for all the oysters taken, which, he estimates, would yield a revenue of $480,000 annually; he would have a flotilla of four steamboats employed to protect the oyster beds from piratical intruders, or he would farm out the oyster beds to private contractors to do with them as they pleased. The Governor thinks the oyster banks will pay a better bonus to the State than paper money banks, and regards them as a richer source of profit than any gold, coal, iron, or copper mines. Whether the Virginians levy a tax on oysters or not, we trust that they will not neglect the admonition of Governor WISE to devise some effective measures for the preservation of these prime necessaries of life. The idea of a world without oysters is altogether too gloomy for contemplation [illegible]

WHAT IS [illegible]—The [illegible] of the South [illegible] over the [illegible] a split in the Democratic party on the Kansas question. They treat the differences that have arisen between prominent members of the party in regard to the Lecompton Constitution, as a direct contest between the South and the North, and talk with their usual confidence and exultation about dividing the Union, unless they are permitted to have things their own way. The Richmond Enquirer, for example, says:—

"As but the Kansas controversy has assumed the shape of a direct conflict between the pro-slavery interests of the South and the anti-slavery interests of the North. The Administration, supported by the bulk of the Northern Democracy, stand with the South in the struggle. But Black Republicanism is reinforced by the defection of Democrats in the North in whose fidelity we have been accustomed to repose implicit confidence. The contest will be arduous and of doubtful issue."

In another article, intended to operate as a salutary warning to Senator DOUGLAS, the South says:—

"If he is willing to exchange the confidence of the South, with the expectation of preferment which that confidence warrants, for the treacherous caress and barren praise of Black Republicanism, he has only to oppose the admission of Kansas on the Lecompton Constitution."

This is very seductive, undoubtedly. But we should like a little explanation from the South as to the precise nature of the issue which creates this intestine strife in the bowels of the Democratic party. How is the Slavery question involved in it? As we understand the matter, the Slavery issue is distinctly submitted to the popular vote;—the only point in dispute is whether the other provisions of the new Constitution shall be subjected to the same process. What possible difference does it make, so far as Slavery is concerned, whether they are or not? Will not the South oblige us by expounding its views of this matter a little more fully.

Corruption in Congress.

The Globe of Nov. 7 devotes thirty columns to the publication of a statement prepared by Dr. R. MAYO, and intended to convict Hon. WM. CULLOM, lately Clerk of the House of Representatives, of having drawn large sums of money from the Treasury ostensibly for books to be furnished to members of Congress, but which he did not expend in the purchase of such books. It is alleged that he made arrangements with members themselves, by which they were to receive part of the money, and give receipts for the books, while Mr. CULLOM pocketed the remainder of the money and bought no books at all. The publishers are the parties on whose behalf the exposé is made;—they were largely interested in the matter, since the books which they had published at great expense, under the assurance that they would be needed for the supply of members, remained under this arrangement upon their shelves unsold.

JOHN C. RIVES, the editor of the Globe, appends to Dr. MAYO's document the following statement of a transaction which he says is within his own knowledge:

"We shall write now about the books that CULLOM has purchased since the law passed authorizing him to do so. Soon afterwards—within a week or two—he went to GALES & SEATON, who told them that Mr. TYLER would call on them to purchase the books they had printed, and whatever he might do would all be right. A day or two after that Mr. TYLER called on them, and said that he needed only ninety-three sets of their books, which amounted to $33,945, and that he would take $13,545 of it, and let them have the balance, $20,400. They took time to consider on the matter, and came to the conclusion that they would not be shaved at so high a rate, and Mr. SEATON wrote a letter so informing Mr. TYLER. He called on them a week or two afterwards, and proposed to take ninety sets only from them, which amounted to $22,650, and let them have $25,295 of it, and take the balance, $7,000, himself. They agreed to his proposition, and gave him an order for the whole amount, $33,945; and he took from them their check for $7,000, and deposited both in the bank of SUTTON, LEA & Co., he, TYLER, being one of that firm, to the credit of GALES & SEATON, on the 24 April, 1857, $32,850, and charged them the same day $7,000, the amount of their check, in his favor. We have seen Messrs. GALES & SEATON's account with SUTTON, LEA & Co., and the above are the first two entries in it."

A Case of Conscience.

Paris and London are now laughing over a very funny farce on a very grave theme. There is nothing at all surprising in this of course, for whenever Paris laughs over a farce, London is very sure to hear of it and to insist on being made merry with the same materials; and it certainly is not odd that a sad subject should breed a droll treatment, there being perhaps no more comical creature on the face of the earth than a fashionable undertaker, unless it be a fashionable undertaker's man. But the particular notableness of the farce of which we now speak, consists in the vast and vague field of moral casuistry and ethical dissertation which it opens to the inquiring mind. The readers of BALZAC will remember how he puts the query of JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU, "Whether any honest man, if he knew that by a wish he could kill a very old mandarin in the heart of China, and immediately inherit a vast fortune in France, would or should utter the wish?" This subtle question afforded Messieurs MOREIRE and MARTIN the germ which they have worked up into a farce entitled "As-tu lui le Mandarin?" There is a poor gentleman in Paris who persuades himself that he has killed his mandarin by touching a certain bell-pull, and is thereafter horribly haunted by the imaginary ghost of the imaginary Celestial. On this haunting of course much mirth may be made—but the query of JEAN JACQUES recurs, and the farce grows serious, when we think of the number of things positively criminal which are daily effected by technically innocent means in every community; and the hypothetical murder of the possible mandarin puts a "case of conscience" on which many a man may not unprofitably reflect.

A RARE CHANCE LOST.—What abominable person was it who said that every young lady in America was bent like Miss WETHERELL's heroines on marrying, and if necessary, converting a young English nobleman? We would not, if we could, remember the name of the wretch, but he must rub his hands in ecstacy over the will of the late Earl FITZWILLIAM. The Globe states that this great Whig peer, who died in the Summer of this year, has done so unusual a thing as to leave estates that produce an income of £20,000 sterling, to his youngest son, who made himself very pleasantly known in this country a few years ago, but was allowed to slip off unnoosed to his native Britain. The second son of the Earl has been remembered in an income of £30,000, while the heir of the coronet is limited to a rental of £120,000, instead of the £300,000 per annum upon which his father supported the dignity of his great Northern name.

PERSONAL.—The report that RUSSELL, the famous Crimean correspondent of the London Times, has been sent to India is unfounded. He has a year's leave of absence from the Times which he devotes to lecturing. We have reason to believe that, upon suitable provocation, he would not object to visiting the United States upon a lecturing tour.

[illegible] the Utah Expedition.

[illegible] Gov. Floyd, [illegible] EXPEDITION THWARTED.

[illegible] that I [illegible] would [illegible]

[illegible] Territory of Utah is peopled almost exclusively by the religious sect known as Mormons. [illegible] their numbers reached a point sufficient to constitute a community capable of asserting independent action, this people have [illegible] themselves from the [illegible] of the laws which governed the [illegible] where they chosen to live. They [illegible] for the laws of the land a theocracy [illegible] for its head an individual whom they believe a prophet of God. This creed [illegible] fanaticism, and receives implicitly [illegible] people, in virtue of what he assumes [illegible] authority derived from revelations received [illegible] him from Heaven. Whenever he finds it [illegible] to exercise any special commands [illegible] revelations of a higher law come [illegible]. From his decrees there is no appeal; [illegible] will there be no restitution. The [illegible] by which this system is perpetuated [illegible] late active play the very worst [illegible] human character. Religious fanaticism [illegible] by impostures and fraud, is allied [illegible] the dull and ignorant; whilst the [illegible] and less honest are held together by [illegible] and licensing their [illegible] and lusts. Remote country, as their [illegible] to the cherished truths of [illegible] is not to be wondered at [illegible] these people have resided, discord [illegible] with the legal authorities have stained [illegible] their history.

[illegible] first hour they found themselves in that [illegible] almost inaccessible region of our Territory which they are now sending defiance [illegible] power, their whole plan has been [illegible] for a successful secession from the [illegible] of the United States, and a permanent [illegible] of their own. They have practised [illegible] offensives unlike anything ever before [illegible] a Christian country, and have inculcated [illegible] distrust of all whose religious faith differs [illegible] their own, whom they characterize [illegible] general denomination of Gentiles. They [illegible] their ranks and harems chiefly from the [illegible] of foreigners, although some parts [illegible] United States have likewise contributed to [illegible]. They are now formidable from [illegible] and much more so from the [illegible] of their position, and the difficulty of traversing the country between our frontiers and [illegible] Lake. This Mormon brotherhood has [illegible] the semblance of obedience to [illegible] of the United States for some years [illegible] all indeed, except as it might confer [illegible] benefit upon themselves, or contribute [illegible] public money in their community. [illegible] it suited their temper or caprice they [illegible] United States authority at defiance. [illegible] a well-grounded belief has prevailed [illegible] Mormons were instigating the Indians to [illegible] our citizens and were exciting [illegible] Indians a feeling of indescriminate [illegible].

[illegible] recite here the many instances in [illegible] and history on which these general [illegible] are founded, especially the conduct [illegible] adopted within the last twelve months [illegible] all authorities of the United States. [illegible] has been the policy and [illegible] Federal Government to avoid collision [illegible] Mormon community. In has borne [illegible] forbearance they have exhibited unmistakable [illegible] when respect for their own [illegible] frequently counseled harsh measures [illegible]. And this forbearance might still be [illegible] and the evils rife amongst them be allowed to work out their own cure if this community [illegible] any other theatre, isolated and [illegible] the seats of civilization, than the one [illegible] possess. But, unfortunately for [illegible], these settlements lie in the [illegible] which leads from our Atlantic [illegible] the new and flourishing commonwealths [illegible] upon our Pacific seaboard. [illegible] in the path; not only themselves [illegible] military and civil authorities of the [illegible], but encouraging, if not exciting, the [illegible] who roam over the vast unoccupied [illegible] of the continent to the pillage and [illegible] of peaceful and helpless emigrant families [illegible] the solitude of the wilderness. [illegible] settlement of our Pacific possessions; [illegible] in those regions of emigrants unable to [illegible] heavy expenses of transit by water and [illegible]; the facility and safety of military, [illegible], political, and social intercommunication [illegible] our Eastern and Western populations [illegible] all depend upon the prompt, absolute, [illegible] removal of a hostile power beset[illegible] midway of its route, at a point where [illegible] and provisions should always be found, [illegible] obstruction, privation, and outrage. [illegible] anxiously the Government might desire [illegible] a collision with this or any other community [illegible] people under its jurisdiction, yet it is [illegible] for it to postpone the duty of reducing [illegible] a rebellious fraternity, besetting [illegible] most important avenues of communication [illegible] its domain, and not only thwarting its authority, but stirring up the fr[illegible] savages, hovering along the highway, [illegible] violence indiscriminately upon all ages, [illegible] conditions of wayfarers.

[illegible] all the circumstances surrounding this [illegible] at the time, it was thought expedient [illegible] past Summer to send a body of troops [illegible] with the civil officers recently appointed [illegible] Territory. As the intention then was [illegible] to establish these functionaries in the office [illegible] which they had been commissioned, and to [illegible] into a geographical military department [illegible] force then dispatched, and now en route [illegible] Territory, was thought to be amply sufficient [illegible] those purposes. Supplies were abundant [illegible] the position was favorable for holding [illegible] in check throughout the whole circumference [illegible] of country. It was hardly within [illegible] reasonable probability that these people [illegible] themselves beyond the pale of reconciliation with the Government by acts of unprovoked [illegible] and wanton rebellion. It will be [illegible], from the documents accompanying [illegible], that flagrant acts of rebellion have [illegible] committed by them in the face of positive as[illegible] given them that the intention of the [illegible] in sending troops into the military [illegible] of Utah was entirely pacific.

[illegible] have had been taken, in preparing for the [illegible] Utah, that nothing should seem to excite [illegible] of any action on the part of the army [illegible] conflicting with the fixed principles of [illegible], by which the military is strictly [illegible] to the civil authority. The instructions [illegible] commanding officer were deliberately [illegible] and carefully drawn; and he was [illegible] to allow any conflict to take place [illegible] the troops and the people of the Territory, [illegible] only in case he should be called on by the [illegible] for soldiers to act as a posse comitatus [illegible] obedience to the laws.

[illegible] with this sentiment, and to assure [illegible] of the real intention of the movement, [illegible] discreet officer was sent in advance of [illegible] to Utah for the purpose of purchasing [illegible] for it, and of assuring the people of the [illegible] of the peaceful intentions of the Government. This duty was faithfully performed; [illegible] man of the fraternity were assured that [illegible] was intended towards them or any [illegible] that nothing could be further from the [illegible] of the Government or the army than to [illegible] for their religious opinions, however [illegible] they might be to the principles of [illegible] morality. This officer found, upon entering [illegible] Territory, that the people defended people had [illegible] in advance of his arrival, or of any information as to the march of the column, [illegible] to resist their approach and prevent, if [illegible] and by force, the entrance of the army [illegible] valley of the Salt Lake. Supplies of [illegible] were refused him. The day after his [illegible] from the city, on his way back, Brigham issued his proclamation, substantially [illegible] war against the United States, and, at [illegible] time, putting the Territory under martial [illegible] the facts connected with this mission of [illegible] VAN VLIET will appear more in detail from [illegible], herewith transmitted.

[illegible] of the menacing attitude of affairs in [illegible] of the importance of a prompt and [illegible] suppression of the spirit of rebellion [illegible], I must repeat my recommendation [illegible] new regiments, which I am persuaded in [illegible] addition to the army, which the [illegible] of the service will allow.

[illegible] Intelligencer says the farmers in [illegible] have realized millions of dollars by [illegible] their produce back till the scarcity was [illegible] the country, and [illegible] the farmers [illegible] and [illegible] higher prices being [illegible].

LATEST FROM KANSAS.

Mass Meeting of the Free-State Men at Leavenworth.

We have received a copy of the Leavenworth City Times of Nov. 8th. There was, on Friday, Nov. 6, a mass meeting in Leavenworth, to consult upon the issues of the day. The meeting was addressed as follows:

President, S. N. LAYM. Vice-Presidents—Stanridge of Tecumseh, Smith of Topeka, Attwood of Lawrence, and Speaks of Gardener; Walking, Wellman, Richardson, Hamb, McCamelle and Eaglesaka of Leavenworth.

The meeting held three sessions—morning, afternoon and night. The following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, A bare majority of the Constitutional Convention, recently assembled at Lecompton, elected by about one thousand voters of Kansas, (twenty-eight only of said bare majority elected by one thousand votes, voting for said Constitution on its adoption,) have attempted, by an unworthy contrivance, to impose upon the people of this Territory a Constitution, without consulting their wish, and against their will;

Whereas, The members of said Convention have refused to submit their action to the approval or disapproval of the voters of the Territory; and

Whereas, in thus acting, they have dashed the known will of nine-tenths of the voters thereof; and

Whereas, This action of a fragment of the said Constitutional Convention, representing, as they did, a pitiable minority of the voters of the Territory, repudiates and overthrows out the distinctive principle of the "Kansas-Nebraska Act," and violates and tramples under foot the rights and the sovereignty of the people; and

Whereas, The people of this Territory, at the regular election in the month of October last, elected members to the Legislative Assembly, by over four thousand majority, in favor of making Kansas a Free State, and therefore opposed to the action of said Convention: Therefore,

Resolved, That the people of Kansas in mass Convention assembled, at Leavenworth, Nov. 27, request the members of said Legislature to meet at Lecompton, on the third day of December next, at 12 M., to suggest such measures, and adopt such action, as the crisis demands.

Resolved, That we have full confidence in the wisdom and integrity of the Delegate Convention to assemble in Lawrence on the 24 of December next, and we hereby pledge ourselves to cooperate with and sustain them in such action as they may make.

Resolved, That we respectfully call his Excellency, Acting Governor F. P. STANTON, to convene the Territorial Legislature forthwith, and that we do so because we firmly believe that such action is necessary to prevent internal broil and civil war.

Resolved, That the Chair appoint nine active persons, whose duty it shall be to serve, personally, a copy of these resolutions, properly authenticated by the officers of this Convention, upon each member elect of the Territorial Legislature.

Resolved, That a special messenger be sent immediately with a copy of these resolutions, indorsed by the officers of this meeting, to his Excellency, Acting-Governor F. P. STANTON.

On motion of Gen. J. LANE, it was then, amid great enthusiasm,

Resolved, That the people of Kansas, in mass Convention assembled, assert, that in case his Excellency, Acting-Governor STANTON, declines to convene the Territorial Legislature—that no other course will be open to the people but putting the Topeka Government in motion, and that we pledge ourselves to adopt that course, and to stand or fall by it.

Another Speech of General Jim Lane.

General LANE addressed the citizens of Lawrence, Kansas, the other day, on the subject, "What shall we do in the present exigency?" The following is the substance of his remarks:

FELLOW-CITIZENS AND MEN OF LAWRENCE: I come not here to make a speech, but to talk with the people of Lawrence. I charge no member of the Free-State Party of Kansas with a lack of zeal or fidelity to the cause, or in trying to divide our united efforts in the true great object—Freedom to Kansas. But I think I see a line of policy in the Free-State Party calculated to create a division by our midst, and build up a Walker Party, and an Anti-Walker Party, a War Party and an Anti-War Party. I may be wrong, but I think I see a line of policy, (meaning the Herald of Freedom policy,) which is intended to build up a Walker Party in the Free-State Party. What has Ransom J. Walker done for the Free-State Party that they should build up a Walker Party? He has rejected the Oxford frauds, which was his bounden duty to do, and the people of Lawrence, over their own signatures, thanked him for doing it. Is that any reason why we should build up a Walker Party in the Free-State Party? For three years the freemen of this Territory have fought the administration and invaders from Missouri, and beat them every time. Let us not make a mistake on this occasion. We come here to adopt a line of policy in the present exigency. When I want my cue, I come to Lawrence. Never during my three years' residence in Kansas, have I differed with the people of Lawrence, except on one occasion, (the General referred to the time when he wanted to hang the bogus Constitutional Convention,) and am glad, to-night, that we agree in the course to be pursued. But a Constitution has been framed at Lecompton, and in the bill of rights, there is Slavery—in the body of the instrument there is Slavery. They ask us to vote for Slavery outside of the Constitution, and they will give us Slavery inside. It is like a man throwing up the copper, "heads I win—tails you lose." They are determined to enslave the greatest party of freemen in the world. When we went into the October election, we took a solemn pledge before Almighty God, and I believe he smiled as we did it, that we would put the Topeka Government in motion if we did not succeed, and now let us do it. [Tremendous and prolonged cheering.] We succeeded in the election, but are to be robbed of our government. We have 18,000 tried men to put the wheels of government in motion. Let CHARLES ROBINSON issue a proclamation calling the Topeka Legislature, just such a one as CHARLEY will get out—and these traitors and conspirators will understand it. [Applause.] Is there a man in this room—an Old Line Democrat—who believes this Constitution is safe in the halls of Congress? If so let him speak. Not one. You know that Kansas is too great a prize to be trusted at Washington. The people must put their own government in motion. The time has come for prompt decision and united action, to repel the usurped government which the minions of Slavery are trying to thrust upon us. Dispose of the Constitution, and dispose of the traitors who made it.

How Machinery aids Christianity.

On Tuesday evening last, Dr. A. K. GARDNER read a paper on the aids furnished by mechanism to the development of Christianity before the Young Men's Christian Union. After assuming that the object and result of Christianity so far as it affects the present life are the amelioration of the moral and physical condition of the human race, he proceeded to the production of proofs of the advantages for Christian growth which have been obtained through the introduction of labor-saving machinery. Those who were compelled to exert every energy of the body, and devote every pulsation of an overtaxed brain to the procuring of daily food, could not be expected to rise in the scale of social advancement. Such would either stand still or retrograde, while those more favorably situated, would march on. In proof of that he instanced the condition of "the serfs of Russia, the peasants of Hungary, and the bog-trotters of Ireland, who had not advanced with the rest of mankind," because "their entire thoughts and labors of the week were necessary for a week's supply of the coarsest food." The fact that entire freedom from toil produced similar results, he did not propose to consider. It was his purpose to show that with the development of Christianity the reasoning faculties of man have been stimulated, and, as a consequent result, the general intelligence has increased; labor has been divided and subdivided; the ordinary tools have been perfected; machinery has been invented and rendered easily available, till now the work of the Fourteenth Century could be done in one quarter of the time that then was requisite. And in the degree in which man had been raised above degrading toil and depressing want, he had been elevated. Steam, which takes the place of human muscle in plying the oar and grooming and driving animals, liberated man from mere toil and allows daylight to shine into his before dimly illuminated mind. When potent machinery plowed the field and reaped the harvest, as experience had shown it could, then the great brotherhood of man would have opportunity to think. Human Slavery, whether groaning in the "factories of England," the mines of Russia, or the cotton fields of America would hear the clink of machines which would overcome and destroy the clank of their shackles. As additional illustration of the effect of machinery, he said it had been a matter of wonder how the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with a population of only 28,500,000 in 1845, could successfully wage her various wars with populous nations in various parts of the world. Even without the alliance of France she would not have hesitated to declare war with Russia; and the Russian nation has a population of 67,000,000. That this could not have been successfully undertaken a few centuries since is allowed; for if one Englishman was equal to three Frenchmen, or the people of any other Continental nation, in physical force, she must assuredly have been conquered by the greatly superior numbers of her united enemies. The discovery of gunpowder has reduced the value of physical force, and yet Great Britain sustains her superiority. And how is this? The answer is ready. Money is strength, and the longest purse wins the battle in the nineteenth century. Granted. But how is it that 28,500,000 of victorious, loyal subjects spending prodigally in frequent wars and in almost as expensive preparations for war, still keeps her monopoly superiority? And here is the point. Great Britain is a country of machines, and by them her population is astonishingly multiplied. It has been stated by a distinguished writer, that the machinery of England alone amounts to, the astounding aggregate of 600,000,000 of men's labor. The machinery of Russia is comparatively valueless. England has, therefore, 600,000,000 against Russia's 67,000,000. The fighting portion of Great Britain and Ireland is an army of 600,000 men, and 600 vessels of war; the force of Russia is 600,000 men and 600 vessels. The population of Great Britain and Russia stand as 1 to 2, but the amount of power as 9 to 1. The superiority of the army in the quality of soldiery is eighteen-hundredth in England, and but one-twenty-[illegible]th in Russia. That is, to every man in Russia [illegible] in fighting [illegible] of these working and nothing [illegible] is engaged in digging there is [illegible] behind, at work, to the amount of 1,000 [illegible]. Her power is in her machinery and mechanism. Give man higher aspects for God. Thus it was that mechanism aided in the development and progress of Christianity. He further illustrated his point by referring to the various household labor-saving machines, which, by relieving woman of the drudgery of housekeeping, enabled her to employ the leisure thus gained in sobler employment. After the conclusion of the paper, there was a spirited discussion of some two hours length, and then the meeting adjourned.

THE STORM AND FOG.—The Summer-like temperature of Monday, which was regarded as so unseasonable, proved a "weather breeder." It was followed on Tuesday night, and throughout the day yesterday, by one of the most disagreeable storms of the season thus far—the wind varying from east to northeast, and accompanied with heavy rain in the forenoon. It was a repetition of the storm of Sunday last, with the wind from the same quarter, but less of it. In the afternoon there was an uncomfortable drizzle, ending with a dense fog, which settled down upon the town, and upon the rivers, rendering navigation difficult. Up to a late hour no serious accident had occurred.

☞ At the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society, on Monday evening, the report of the Finance Committee was read and accepted. The receipts of the Exhibition and Festival this year amounted to $780 81, and the expenditures were $782 90—exceeding the receipts by $2 15. Besides this, $236 was the cost of the premiums given out. The following are the officers for the ensuing year:

Coroner's Inquests.

SUICIDE BY TAKING ARSENIC.—Coroner GAMBLE held an inquest yesterday on the body of Jane Murray, 24 years of age, who committed suicide at an early hour yesterday morning, at the Tenth Ward Station-house, by taking arsenic. The woman called at the Station-house for lodging, and shortly after she was shown to her room it was ascertained that she had taken arsenic. A physician was called, but she died at 2 o'clock. The deceased stated, previous to her death, that her mother, who resided at No. 26 Henry-street, turned her out of the house two years ago, charging her with being a prostitute, which charge she asserted was then without foundation. The cruelty shown to her, and want caused by the desertion of her friends, compelled her, however, to turn prostitute, and disgusted with this mode of life, she committed suicide. A verdict of suicide was rendered.

DEATH FROM SCALDING.—An inquest was held yesterday at No. 179½ Division-street, on the body of an infant child, named William Hemmel, who died from the effects of scalds received on the 6th inst., by the upsetting of a kettle of boiling water. A verdict was rendered of "accidental death."

DEATH FROM APOPLEXY.—An inquest was held yesterday, at No. 170 West Sixteenth-street, on the body of WM. ABRAM VAN DEGRIF, who died from a fit of apoplexy. The deceased was walking along Fourteenth-street, near Seventh-avenue, when he was seized with the fit, and fell senseless to the pavement, and died shortly afterward. Verdict, "Death from Apoplexy."

ACCIDENTALLY DROWNED.—JAMES W. JOHNSTON, one of the deck hands employed on the steamtug Fulton, lying at the foot of Pier No. 8, N. R., on Tuesday night was accidentally knocked overboard by the rope holding the vessel to the pier, and drowned. His body has not been recovered. The deceased was 51 years of age, and leaves a wife and several children residing at East Troy.

DANGEROUS POSITION OF MAGRAW'S EXPEDITION.—Some anxiety is felt, by those most familiar with the matter, concerning MAGRAW'S expedition. It will be remembered that MAGRAW started from this place last Summer, to establish a wagon route to the Pacific under an act of Congress. We have already stated some of the difficulties which the expedition were forced to encounter, and should not be at all surprised to learn, at any moment, that the party were destroyed by the Indians.

MAGRAW has but twenty men. His Winter quarters are on Wind River, above the Paw-paw-chee, and about 50 miles northwest of the South Pass. The country abounds with game, and no danger need be apprehended except from the Indians. The Rocky Mountain Cheyennes and Shu-Shawnee tribes are openly at war with the Government, and take every possible occasion to wreak their vengeance on the whites. They number thousands of blood-thirsty warriors, and would have no difficulty in cutting off the expedition to a man.—Leavenworth Times, Nov. 26.

THE COURT-MARTIAL OF COL. SUMNER.—I will be recollected, that Col. E. V. SUMNER, of the First Cavalry, has recently been on trial at a general Court-martial, held at Fort Leavenworth. Although the rendition of the Court has not yet been officially promulgated, yet we learn from a reliable source, that he had been suspended from rank and pay for the period of four months, and to be reprimanded by the General-in-Chief. We also understand that the Commanding General (Gen. SCOTT) has confirmed the sentence of the Court, but has remitted the penalty. The charges on which Col. SUMNER was tried, were preferred by Major GEORGE DEAS, Assistant Adjutant-General. In this connection, we will state there is a rumor that in the trial of this case, a difficulty arose, the precise nature of which we are not yet advised, between Col. SUMNER and Gen. HARNEY, the former objecting to the latter sitting as President of the Court, and it is hinted that Col. SUMNER will in consequence, prefer charges against Major DEAS and Gen. HARNEY.—St. Louis Republican.

The season of steamboat navigation between Dubuque and St. Paul commenced on the 1st day of May and closed on the 14th day of November, just 198 days, which is the shortest season by several days since 1844.

THE [illegible] MASS.—The [illegible] JOHN, the murderer, [illegible] which resulted in a sentence of death. He took but little food during the last day or two of his stay, and continued his abstemious course until Monday evening, when he asked for and ate a large allowance of boiled ham and milk. His sister and aunt called upon him on Monday, before leaving for their homes in Stafford, Conn., and visited him nearly an hour. They were very much affected at the intelligence, but he preserved his accustomed imperturbable manner, saying but little to them, and seemingly caring nothing for them. "His feelings," as Dr. ANDREW would say, "seemed to burst through this insanity," however, after their departure, for he then sat down and had a good crying spell. His mother is still in the city, but has seen no him since the conclusion of the trial. We understand she announces her purpose of remaining in the city to take care of her son, who she says, is greatly abused and maltreated by the keepers of the prison. Those persons, however, who have better opportunity than herself to form an unbiased opinion of the conduct of the jail officers, allege that JOHNS is kindly cared for, and has every attention paid to him which a man in his situation could expect.

DEFALCATION IN THE BAY STATE MILLS, AND POLITICAL BUBBLE.—The Boston Courier of Wednesday says: We observe that the President of the Bay State Mills, at the meeting of the stockholders yesterday, stated a deficit to exist of $120,000, which "could not be traced." It is presumed he meant by the books of the concern. We hope no pains will be spared to trace it into whatever shape it may have assumed. Our readers are altogether too well aware of the fact for us to make any distinct statement on the subject, that rumors, gathering strength, have been prevalent in this community for many weeks, as to large sums of money said to have been expended in procuring the passage of the hemp-tariff of last year—the same which Mr. BANKS absurdly declared in his Faneuil Hall speech, before election, would have saved us from our commercial disasters had it only gone into operation six months earlier! We have no disposition to make undue use of rumors likely to affect any man's reputation, public or private—but for the credit of the country and the honor of our politics, we do hope that the most rigid scrutiny will be applied to all those matters, and that whoever, in whatever position, may prove to be implicated in them, will be compelled to meet the public ordeal!

It is estimated that there are now lying unsold on the wharves at Gloucester, Mass., $130,000 worth of mackerel and codfish. The foreign imports of fish at that port have been very large this year.

There are now larger shipments of leather from Boston to San Francisco than for many months previously.

NEW-YORK AND ERIE RAILROAD COMPANY.—PROPOSALS FOR LOAN.—Subscriptions will be received at the office of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, in the City of New-York, until the first day of November, 1857, for the purchase of so much of the Bonds of the Company, redeemable on the first of October, 1920, bearing seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, on the first days of April and October.

They will be sold at par payable as follows:

10 per cent. in cash at the time of subscribing.
40 per cent. in monthly installments of 10 per cent., or in cash, at the option of the purchaser.

These Bonds are guaranteed by a Mortgage on the entire road and its franchises, on all the household property of the Company, including the wharves, ferry privileges and landed property of the Long Dock Company of Jersey City, and the entire equipment of the Company.

The object of the loan is to fund the present floating debt of the Company, and to obtain means to continue the construction of the tunnel, depot, wharves, and other improvements on the Long Dock property. It will only increase the present indebtedness of the Company about $1,000,000. The following is a comparative statement of the past and present financial position of the Company:

	Sept. 30, 1856.	Sept. 30, 1857.	Aug. 1, 1857.
Capital Stock	$10,000,000	$10,000,000	$11,000,000
Funded Debt	24,621,000	24,621,000	24,621,000
Floating Debt	1,311,792	1,104,619	1,000,136
Interest on Bonds due 1st August, less am't deposited to meet it			122,500
Total indebtedness	$35,932,792	$35,725,619	$37,743,636
Cash and Cash items	$160,792	$600,859	$137,077
Materials	894,895	872,541	836,000
Fuel	487,115	730,465	630,000
Steamers and Propellers on the Lakes	83,975	218,331	261,220
Rolling Stock loaned to C. & N. P. R. R.	100,000	100,000	100,000
Other Assets	10,456	46,224	28,508
Due by Agents	—	—	261,000
Advanced to Long Dock Company	—	—	420,631
Bonds of 1875 in Sinking Fund	323,000	794,000	1,345,900
	$1,859,237	$3,362,420	$3,820,336
Liabilities over Assets	$34,073,511	$32,363,143	$33,874,512

Thus the expenditures of the Long Dock Company are judicious, and sure to prove profitable to the Company. The Erie Railroad Company, no one can doubt, who will examine the subject. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company have a lease (with the right to purchase at the original cost at any time after six years) of the entire property of the Long Dock Company, consisting of over 2,500 lots of ground, exclusive of the streets opened or to be opened, with large bulkheads, ferry slips and wharves now in construction. The New-York and Erie Railroad fleet of barges, tugs, ferryboats, ferry slips and wharves, for the transfer of freight from the Erie Railroad to the cars, or from warehouses into which the cars will run and be unloaded in any weather, without danger or injury to property. The facilities and economy which this will offer to shippers and receivers must largely increase the traffic of the New-York and Erie Railroad Company, and enable it to charge higher rates for transportation than those charged by other routes. The ferries will undoubtedly prove a source of revenue to the Company, whereas, at present, the ferriage of passengers and merchandise is a heavy tax on the Company.

Any portion of the 2,500 lots not needed by the New-York and Erie Railroad Company can be sold at any time, and by the terms of the lease the proceeds must be applied to the extinguishment of the debt, or to a Sinking Fund for the extinguishment of the debt incurred for the improvement of the Long Dock property. The value of this property must be very great whenever the New-York and Erie Company transfer their traffic to the new terminus. CHARLES MORAN, President.

NATHANIEL MARSH, Secretary.

Police Intelligence.

THE LATE ROBBERY OF $10,000 FROM THE BARK PENSACOLA—PORTION OF THE MONEY RECOVERED.—About ten days ago two kegs of gold doubloons, amounting to $10,000, it will be remembered, were stolen from the bark Pensacola, while the vessel lay in the East River. The captain of the bark left the vessel and money for a few hours in charge of the first mate and steward, and on his return found both the men and the money gone. The offer of a reward of $2,500 for the recovery of the money has stimulated the Police to unremitting efforts to find the thieves and recover the stolen booty. Officers Elder and McCord, of the Detective Police, succeeded in getting a clue to Wm. Pagan, the colored steward, and traced him to Farmingdale, L. I., where they arrested him on Tuesday, and yesterday brought him to the City. Pagan strenuously insisted that they were mistaken in their man, and defied them to discover any evidences of the robbery. The officers were not slow in making the necessary search, and at length found a bag, containing $4,400 of the stolen money. When the money was found the accused quietly "owned up," and expressed a pretended delight that the treasure had passed from his possession, as it had "given him a deal of trouble and uneasiness." Before the officers left Farmingdale they learned that Pagan had been the subject of considerable interest in the town. He gave out that he was a fugitive from Slavery, and entertained the people with stirring accounts of the sufferings he had undergone as a slave, and his miraculous and "hair-breadth escapes" on his journey to the North.

Pagan was yesterday taken before Justice CORNELIUS at the Lower Police Court, and locked up for trial. He says he joined with the mate in the robbery, as the latter threatened to throw him overboard if he refused. After the robbery he parted from the mate and has not seen him since, and knows nothing of his present whereabouts. Pagan gives his age as 28, and says he was born in Delaware.

CHARGE OF ARSON.—A colored man named Charles W. Bennett was committed yesterday by Justice FLANDREAU, on a charge of setting fire on Monday last, to the dwelling-house No. 163 West Twenty-eighth-street, occupied by Mrs. Cox and family. Mr. Baker, the Fire Marshal, instituted a thorough examination in the case which led to his committal. The testimony taken before the Fire Marshal shows that Bennett had some articles of furniture in Mrs. Cox's house; that he formerly lodged there, and was owing some $2; that Mrs. Cox refused to allow him to remove his things until he paid the money. Mrs. Cox went out of town some eight days prior to the fire, and during her absence Bennett demanded his furniture of her daughters; they refused to give it up until their mother's return. Bennett declared on more than one occasion, that if they did not give him his things he would set fire to the house. On Saturday night, prior to the fire, another demand was made for the things by Bennett, and similar threats made. The accused denies the charge, and says he can show that he was not at the house in question on that night.

ASSAULTING AND ROBBING A FEMALE.—On Monday night as Caroline Wallie, a young woman residing at the corner of Bayard and Mott streets, was going to her house from a grocery store, two persons assaulted her, knocked her down and robbed her of a gold watch worth $50, and her shawl. She gave an alarm, and the police arrested a man named Owen Gillan, and a mulatto, who goes by the name of "Yellow Jim," suspected of having committed the assault and theft. As Miss White could not then fully identify them they were let go. She afterwards, however, felt sure that they were the parties who had assaulted her, and yesterday Gillan was rearrested and locked up by Justice CORNELIUS. The police are on the track of "Yellow Jim."

BURGLARY.—The boot and shoe store of John Whitlock, 250 Tenth-avenue, was broken into Tuesday night, and a quantity of boots and shoes, valued at $40, carried away. Three young men, named Jeremiah Flynn, Francis Forrester and John Richmond, were arrested a few hours afterwards on suspicion of being the burglars, and locked up in the Twentieth Ward Station-house. Flynn and Forrester managed, before morning, to escape from the Station-house. Their confederate was taken yesterday before Justice FLANDREAU, and was committed for trial. Some of the stolen goods were recovered.

ROBBING A VESSEL.—A youth giving his name as Wm. Bartlett was arrested yesterday charged with having, on the night of the 14th ult., in company with two other boys, stolen $630 from the barge Cassadie. The youth on his arrest confessed having participated in the theft, but says that the money has all been spent by himself and his confederates. Justice CORNELIUS committed the accused for trial in default of $1,000 bail.

STEALING A HORSE AND WAGON.—About two months ago, a horse and wagon, valued at $500, belonging to Mr. Baird, of Huntington, L. I., was taken possession of by some daring thief, at the corner of Broadway and Forty-ninth-street, where Mr. Baird had left the horse standing. The thief whipped the horse and vehicle speedily out of sight. Yesterday the horse was found in a livery stable up town, and a man named George V rien arrested, charged with the theft. The accused gave bail in the sum of $500 to answer the charge.

STEALING HOGS.—On Tuesday night the Police of the Fifth Ward arrested two men, named Bartley Fox and Wm. Mann, having nine hogs in their possession, which they are supposed to have stolen. The men were held to await examination.

"THE REVOLT IN INDIA."—C. W. TAYLOR'S new drama of this name continues to crowd FURBY'S National Theatre night after night. It is a magnificent affair, and well placed upon the stage. The cast embraces the full strength of the company. We predict for it a long and successful run. It is to be repeated to-night for the tenth time, and with it, the drama of the "Gun-Maker of Moscow," and comedy of the "Captain's Not a Miss."

LONG ISLAND.

Recapitulated.

The Central Bank, Brooklyn, which suspended during the panic, and for which a Receiver was appointed, has recently elected SEYMOUR L. HEVERSE, President of the Brooklyn Railroad Company, President, and has quietly resumed business again.

BROOKLYN YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—The December meeting of this body was held on Tuesday evening. A number of new members were proposed. Mr. WM. J. GIBBINS made an interesting statement of the condition of the Mission Sunday School, established at the Poorhouse, in Flatbush, under the auspices of the Association. Twelve teachers, five of whom are ladies, are now engaged in this school, and the average number of scholars is 200. The work is very successful. A festival for the benefit of the enterprise is to be given on the 29th inst. The essay of the evening was read by Mr. CHARLES SMITH. Subject: "The Life and Character of AARON BURR." The memory of that distinguished personage was vindicated from certain erroneous statements; but the attempt brought out a brisk discussion. A letter from the Secretary of the Brooklyn Association for the Relief of the Poor, acknowledged the receipt of $150 from this Society. The young men have on foot, a number of practical plans for the Winter months, and appear to prosper.

MURDER TRIAL IN BROOKLYN.—In the Kings County Court of Oyer and Terminer yesterday, before Judge EMORY and Justices EMMONS and SCHOONMAKER, SAMUEL HAYS was placed upon trial for the alleged killing of his wife on the 10th of June last.

District-Attorney SCHOONMAKER, conducts the prosecution, and Messrs. MOEAN and REYNOLDS appear for the accused. The evidence and the summing was finished yesterday, and the Jury will be charged by the Court this morning.

The indictment alleges the offence to have been committed on June 10 last, at the residence of deceased, on Hoyt near Butler-street, Brooklyn. The testimony went to show that the woman's death was caused by kicks and blows about the head. Both deceased and prisoner were of very intemperate habits, and lived in a state of semi-barbarism. They not only drank to excess themselves, but were in the habit of giving liquor to a child of theirs, only three years of age. On the day the offence was committed this child and the mother were both intoxicated.

Under the usual instructions from the Court, the Jury were permitted to separate until this morning, when the case will be proceeded with.

THE POOR.—Lady Washington Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, E. D., of Brooklyn, have contributed $25 to the fund for the relief of the poor in that District.

NEW-JERSEY.

THE SEWER QUESTION SETTLED.—The question as to whether it is the duty of the Water Commissioners or the Mayor and Common Council of Jersey City to issue scrip in payment for the construction of sewers, which has been for some time under discussion by the two Boards, and upon which conflicting legal opinions have been given, was settled on the part of the Common Council at their meeting on Tuesday evening by the passage of a resolution declaring that they did not deem it their right or duty to issue the required certificates, thereby throwing the matter into the hands of the Water Commissioners. The latter Board have all along maintained that they had no right to issue the certificates—that the power lay with the Common Council; but they held a special meeting yesterday on the subject, at which the President was authorized to execute and issue bonds to the amount of $50,000, with which to pay for the construction of the two sewers now being built.

O. Zabriskie.

CITY MISSIONARY'S REPORT.—The Jersey City Missionary has rendered his report for the month of November, from which we learn that during the month he preached nineteen sermons, made ninety-four calls on the sick and the poor, attended eight miscellaneous meetings, obtained three temperance pledges, promises of twenty-two children to attend Sabbath school, and two persons to attend Church. The donations of the month were $149 15, and the disbursements $25 25. The tract distributors visited 4,184 families, and distributed 4,019 tracts, three Bibles and three Testaments.

ELECTION OF CASHIER OF THE HUDSON COUNTY BANK.—At a meeting of the Directors of the Hudson County Bank, held at Jersey City yesterday, LEWIS N. CONDIT, Esq., was elected to the vacant cashiership in that institution. Mr. CONDIT is at present Secretary of the Morris Canal and Banking Company, which position he has held for several years. WEDNESDAY, Dec. 9—P. M.

The meagre list of Stock sales at the early Board this forenoon denotes the dullness with which the business of the day opened. The same feeling—corresponding very nearly with the disagreeable character of the weather—continued throughout the dealings. Prices yielded ¼@¾ ⅌ cent. from the sales of Tuesday on the list generally, and as much as 2@3 ⅌ cent. on Illinois Central shares, which went down to 86 ⅌ cent. After the close of the printed list, the disposition of the general market was to rather better rates, particularly on New-York Central, which, after selling down to 73¾, seller 10 days, closed 74¼@¾ cash; Erie, 16¾ ⅌ cent.; Panama, 92 ⅌ cent.; and Reading, 52. At the annual election of Directors for the New-York Central, at Albany to-day, Mr. JOHN DAVID WOLFE, of this City, was substituted for Mr. E. G. FAILE, who declined serving another term. The selection is one that will prove satisfactory to the great body of the stockholders. Mr. ISAAC TOWNSEND, the other City Director last year, is retained. Several changes are made in the country Directors. The following comprise the new Board: Erastus Corning, Albany; Dean Richmond, Buffalo; John H. Chiddell, Auburn; Horace White, Syracuse; Livingston Spraker, Palatine; Alonzo C. Paige, Schenectady; Cornelius L. Tracy, Troy; Jacob Gould, Rochester; Isaac Townsend, New-York; Nathaniel Thayer, Boston; John V. L. Pruyn, Albany; John L. Schoolcraft, Albany; John D. Wolfe, New-York.

In the Money Market, the demand for Bullion continues active, and some considerable parcels have been put up for the Kangaroo, for Liverpool to-morrow, and the Fulton, for Southampton and Havre on Saturday. The two vessels will take out something like $750,000. The shipment by the Africa to-day is $1,691,389. The whole movement from New-York direct for December, as intimated a few days ago, will probably reach $8,000,000, or about six millions after the Atlantic shipment on Saturday last. That shipment about squared the late receipts at this port from England, and we are now in a fair way of sending as much more. The shipments may well be spared at the present time from this side, and will afford an acceptable proof on the other side that the debt-paying disposition and ability of the country are rapidly recovering from the recent blow to commercial confidence. A few packets more, it is believed, will set the exchanges all right, and add to the export movement of the great staples of grain and cotton, bills against which are now suffering from the uncertainty of the English markets, and the consequent distrust in prices and credits.

The Discount Brokers are having a little more to do. There is some new paper making outside the dates usually taken at Bank. The terms range from 7 to 12 ⅌ cent. At Bank there is still a scarcity of prime short paper. A number of the Banks passed up their Country Currency 6 ⅌ cent. certificates to their discount line last week, whice was the principal cause of the moderate increase in the aggregate return. But even these certificates are rapidly melting away. When the Country Circulation was asserted at the close of November, the amount represented was $7,940,000. This sum total fell to $6,500,000 before the 6 ⅌ cent. interest attached, and it is now below $5,000,000. The Metropolitan Bank Directors have called in the remaining installment on their new Stock. The Bank of New-York will make no further call at present. The Receiver of the Mechanics' Banking Association will, in a few days, pay off the remaining 50 ⅌ cent. due to the creditors of the concern.

The Boston Post says of the money market of that city:

"The Boston money market continues in the quiet condition heretofore reported. Upon the whole, money is reasonably accessible at the banks in moderate sums, on live paper of unquestionable strength, or to customers who retain bank confidence. In the street, money is abundant on such notes as are now deemed 'A No. 1.' In this class strong grocers' paper is prominent. With a first-class indorsement, it sells readily at 9@10 ⅌ cent. The market, however, is very irregular, and notes that can be proved to be quite as good as the favorites of the street, can be had at all rates from 12@16. Very good paper was sold at 18 on Friday and Saturday. There would, doubtless, be a brisk demand for money if people supposed they could find a supply at any price. As it is, the amount of street negotiations is not large.

New-York funds have been quite abundant of late, as we said they would be, in our last. Specie is in tolerable supply outside. The brokers buy at ⅛@¼ premium, and sell at ⅜ and upwards. The market has recently been stripped of English sovereigns at $4 67@$4 68."

The Cotton Trade.

From Wright's Weekly Circular.

Per Africa.] NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Dec. 9, 1857.

Since my circular of 1st inst., we have received advices per America to 21st and Baltic to 25th ult. The former reported more heavy failures, great stringency in money, serious commercial embarrassments, a decline in the Liverpool Cotton Market of ¼d. ⅌ lb., with sales for the week of 21,000 bales; consumption steadily decreasing in the manufacturing districts and in Manchester; trade almost stagnant. The latter advised an improved feeling in financial matters, but a further list of failures. Sales of Cotton for three days in Liverpool, 12,000 bales; prices nominal, at ¼d. ⅌ lb. decline. Consols better, closing at 89⅞@90⅛.

In this market there has been a limited inquiry from spinners, some of whom are resuming work to a limited extent. The sales have been in small lots. Prices are not yet fully established; 11c. may be quoted as the figure for Middling Uplands; Good Middling to Middling fair, 11¾c. There is little Gulf Cotton here, and qualities of Middling, of all growths, are exceedingly scarce, not only in this, but all the Southern markets. There is really no demand for export; the few sales made are of parcels offered at prices which tempt a buyer into a venture to Liverpool, Havre, or a Continental market. The sales for the week are estimated at 1,500 bales. The clearances during same time have been: To Liverpool, 1,067 bales; Hamburg, 50. Total, 1,117 bales.

COTTON IN TREASURY.—A parcel of Middling Orleans with freight at ¼d. ⅌ lb. was sold prior to receipt of the America's news, at 11¾c. ⅌ lb. There has been nothing done since. The supply of transit Cotton is not large, and as a general thing it has been withdrawn from offer.

Southern Markets have been tolerably active; the business done has been for England, France and the Continents, a larger proportion than of late for the latter. By telegraph we learn that during the week ending the 4th inst., the sales were smaller, particularly after the America's news was reported, closing at prices showing a decline of ⅛c. ⅌ lb. At Mobile the reduction submitted to on receipt of the America's news was also ⅛c.; and at the interior markets of Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina, the decline varied from ⅛@⅙c. ⅌ lb.

Cost.—It is difficult at all times to determine the extent of a Cotton crop six months before the bulk of it arrives at the shipping ports. This year the difficulties are increased by the recent financial panic. Planters were some weeks in doubt as to the propriety of sending their crops to market. This, together with the late picking season, has operated against a fair comparison of receipts into the ports this year with last, or of 1855-6, and, therefore, the present deficit of 231,000 bales, as compared with last year, or of 348,000 bales, as compared with the year previous, is no argument upon the question of crop.

CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.

Annual Meeting for the Election of Directors.

From the Albany Statesman of Last Evening.

A number of the stockholders of the Central Railroad Company—principally gentlemen from New-York and Utica—assembled this morning in Mayor FERRY's room in the City Hall, to hear a report from a Committee appointed at a recent meeting in New-York, and to decide upon a ticket to be supported at the election of the Board of Directors, held this day. The meeting organized by making Mr. GEORGE T. TRIMBLE, of New-York, Chairman; Messrs. JAMES SAYRE, of Utica, and ASA SPRAGUE, of Rochester, Vice-Chairmen, and Mr. H. HUTCHINSON, of Utica, Secretary.

Mr. DEMOND presented the following:

Resolved by the Stockholders here assembled of the New-York Central Railroad Company, That in future its President and Directors are prohibited from any increase of its capital stock or any increase of its present debt over and above the amount of each now actually issued, save as hereinafter excepted, unless the approval of a majority in amount of the Stock represented in public meeting convened, shall be first had and obtained. Should, however, any extraordinary emergency arise whereby it is necessary to incur a debt not exceeding $250,000 over and above the present actual indebtedness before such approval of Stockholders can be secured and obtained, this resolution shall not be construed to prevent the President and Directors from incurring such debt in the needful protection of the property under such emergency.

Resolved, That the construction account of this road be closed, except so far as the completion of the double track to the 30th of September, 1857, the fiscal year, so that hereafter the actual and current expenditures shall be taken from the gross revenues, and its precise net revenue thus ascertained.

Resolved, That no subscription, indorsement, lease or other implications shall be made for or with any other corporation, individual or individuals.

Resolved, That all purchases for the use of this corporation shall be made by a Committee of the Directors, or by agents holding their appointment from such Committee, though at the expense of the Company, and that said Committee pass upon and certify to the correctness of all bills before presentation to the Treasurer; without the certificate of such Committee no such payment shall be made.

Resolved, That all free tickets be abolished, save only to the Directors of the road.

Resolved, That a Committee of seven stockholders, not Directors, shall annually, at least thirty days before the election of Directors, examine into the accounts and any transactions of this Company; and that they employ two or more well qualified accountants at the expense of this Corporation, to aid them in said examination, and report the same to a meeting of stockholders to be held in the city of Albany, at least twenty days before the next election, at which meeting the names of stockholders proposed to be voted for as Directors shall be submitted and approved of by said meeting. That Joseph Battelle, H. Belane, J. R. Wolfe, Albert R. Gallatin, C. Stebbins, Cassenovia; A. H. Tracy, Buffalo; F. G. Clark, Utica, be such Committee.

Resolved, That the President and Directors are hereby requested to convene stockholders each and every year, at least thirty days prior to an election, to hear and examine the accounts, and to consider the past annual transactions of the Company, and to discuss any subject connected with the road or its management.

Resolved, That Stockholders be requested to attend in person, and not by proxy, so as to look after and protect their own property. That by such personal attendance a wholesome check is kept up between the Stockholders and their Board of Directors; the good sense and judgment of all is brought to bear upon the past and contemplated transactions of the corporation, and each Stockholder returns home satisfied with its business and his property, the general tone of its management, and thus is inspired with all reasonable and necessary confidence, and does not exclusively rely upon paper reports.

Resolved, That the system of proxies and the more pernicious one of concentrating these in the hands of executive officers, or directors, should be discountenanced. Practically, it destroys reasonable and proper check between the stockholders and their agents. That while all reasonable power should and must necessarily be vested in President and Directors, for the year, for the effectual management of a railroad or any other corporate property, an account of these stewardships should be rendered each and every year in person to stockholders.

Resolved, That the policy of the New-York Central Railroad Company, as to the rates of transit, is one of the most vital interest to all of the stockholders; that since the organization of the Company the reduction temporarily of these has largely diminished net revenues; that without embarking in the question of how much or little of this policy may have been forced upon the New-York Central Railroad Company by rival interests, we feel and know that a reduction of rates below points that give a fair remuneration for service performed is damaging, and brings property of stockholders in competition with other property. That should competition from any cause be so embarrassed in the future, the following Stockholders——be a Committee to investigate into the causes of the same, and seek in conjunction with our President and Directors, to apply a remedy, or if in the judgment of such Committee it be expedient, said Committee may convene Stockholders. They are also enjoined to have a watchful eye to any increase of stocks or debt as referred to in the first resolution.

Mr. DEMOND stated that these resolutions had been agreed upon by the Committee appointed at the New-York meeting. He spoke in favor of the resolutions, explaining the necessity that existed for their adoption, not because the integrity of the present directors was necessarily doubted, but in order that a greater degree of confidence might be imparted amongst stockholders, and the sneers and unjust attacks of a hostile press be prevented. He vindicated the policy of placing certain restraining powers in the hands of Committee of Stockholders, and concluded by announcing that Mr. SEYMOUR, of Utica, whose name had been proposed as one of the new Board of Directors at the New-York meeting, had refused to accept the position. He therefore desired to substitute the name of CHARLES A. MANN, of Utica, in his place.

Mr. HUGH WHITE, of Syracuse, thought a handfull of stockholders had no right to dictate to a Board of Directors, although they might offer what recommendations they saw fit. If there were any leakages he thought a Committee of Stockholders would be fully authorized in endeavoring to find out what and where they were. He did not see any reason why the name of Mr. L. SPRAGUE should be left off the Board of Directors, and proposed his name in place of that of Mr. MANN.

Mr. DAVID WAGER, of Utica, spoke warmly in favor of a reform in the management of the road, and urged the necessity of Stockholders of every railroad in the United States to look after their own interests. He urged the retention of the name of MANN, of Utica, on the ticket; but did not entertain much hope of electing him, unless the power behind the throne should yield to the reasonable requests of the Stockholders.

Mr. DEMOND was willing to leave the matter open, and suffer Stockholders to vote for Mr. SPRAGUE or Mr. MANN, as they might see fit.

Mr. H. WHITE objected further to the resolutions on the ground that they made charges by insinuation against the present Board.

Rev. A. SPENCER, of Utica, did not see that the resolutions attached any person or attached blame to the recent directors. He deemed them highly proper and wise, as indicating in the present troubled condition of the finances of the country, that the Stockholders were prepared to look after their own interests. He reviewed and condemned the existing system of suffering directors to vote on proxies, and expressed the belief that no foreign stock should be represented by proxies in the election of officers.

HUGH J. HASTINGS asked what the meeting was called for. It was charged by New-Yorkers that some swindling and knavery existed on the part of the Directors. If this was true, it was the duty of honest men to turn them out. It was child's play to strike a man on the back and then oil him down. Stockholders should act in this as they would act in their private business; and if the Directors are dishonest men and thieves, the stockholders should turn them out.

Mr. DEMOND said that no insinuation was made or intended against the Directors by the New-York stockholders. On the contrary, the resolutions it is admitted that the financial crisis for the present year was unexpected, and the crop itself three weeks later than on any one, but the preparations for a large crop were universal, and a greater area of land was put under cultivation for Cotton than ever before attempted.

The weather for the growth of the plant through the Summer was neither particularly favorable, nor the reverse, but a fair average season. In the early part of September too much rain fell in some sections, and the boll-worm did some slight damage in others; about the middle of September the weather became propitious; throughout the whole of October and for two weeks in November, it was of the most favorable character for maturing and picking the cotton. We had a slight frost in some of the more northern cotton States early in November, but it was not, however, until the 19th and 20th of November that the further growth of the plant was stopped by a killing frost. Last year it will be remembered that the season was also late at the commencement, the planting only to an ordinary extent, the weather during the Summer not remarkably favorable, a storm in August, which was ascertained to have been very injurious, slig.t frosts as early as the 23d and 24th of September, again on 28th of September, again on the 6th of October; by the middle of October the further growth of cotton was stopped by a killing frost, and by the middle of November the crop was nearly all gathered in. The result being a total of 2,909,000 bales.

Judging, therefore, by comparison with last year, as well as by the best information from the various points in the South, I feel warranted in saying that the crop of 1857-8 is likely rather to exceed than fall below a total of three and a quarter millions of bales.

Receipts show an increase on the corresponding week of last year. This will not be maintained for some weeks at least, as our receipts last season, to the end of January, were unusually heavy, whereas this season the weight of receipts is not likely to be felt until after Christmas.

Exports are small to all points for the week under review. The total to Great Britain, however, is 86,000 bales more than to corresponding dates last year, while to France the deficit is 23,000 bales. The export to other foreign parts is only 5,000 bales behind last year to same date. After two or three weeks we may have a decreased export for awhile, as it has been difficult for the past ten days to sell exchange at the South against shipments of cotton to any foreign market.

The following is a statement of the movement in Cotton since Sept. 1, as compared with the previous four years:

	1857.	1856.	1855.	1854.	1853.
